The Chinook of 1927

THE ANNUAL PUBLICATION OF THE ASSOCIATED STUDENTS OF THE STATE COLLEGE OF WASHINGTON

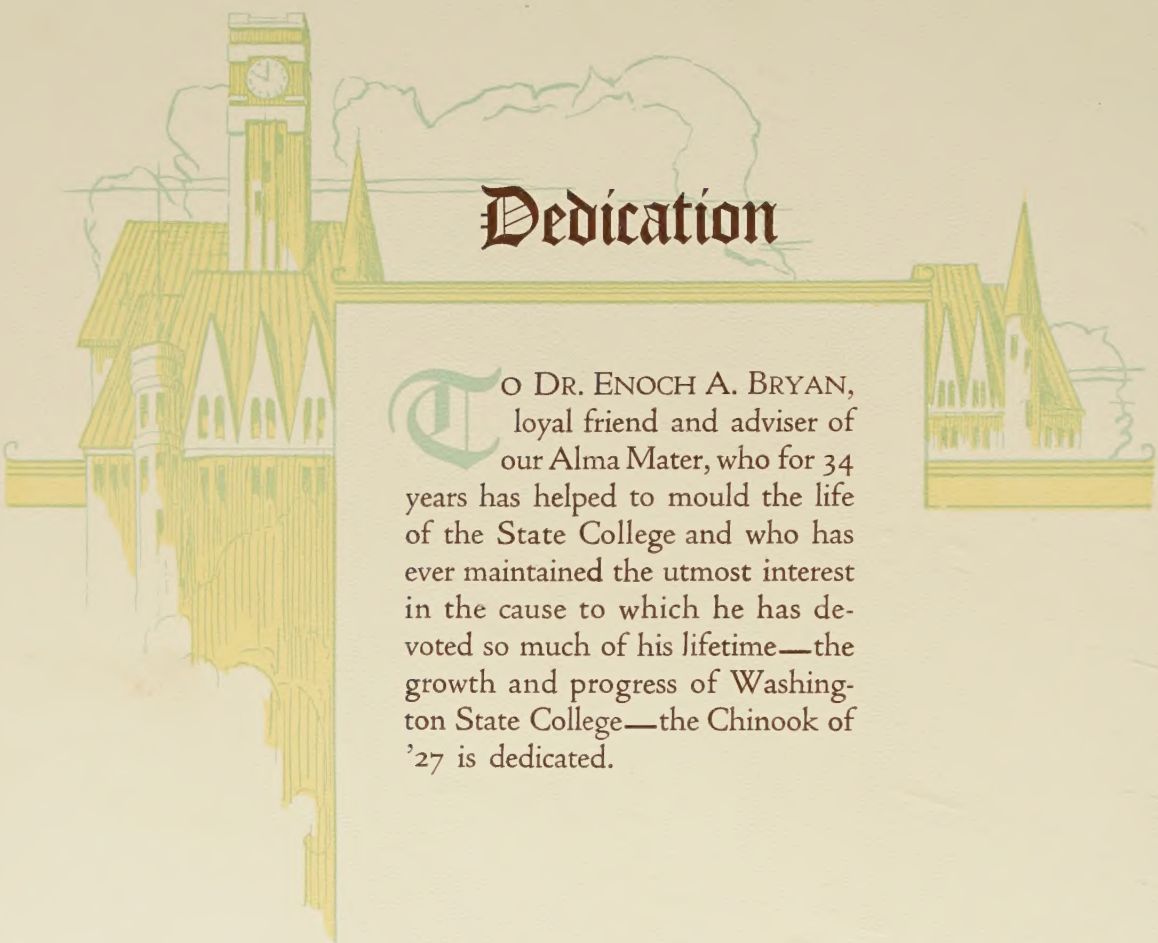
Volume Twenty-Eight

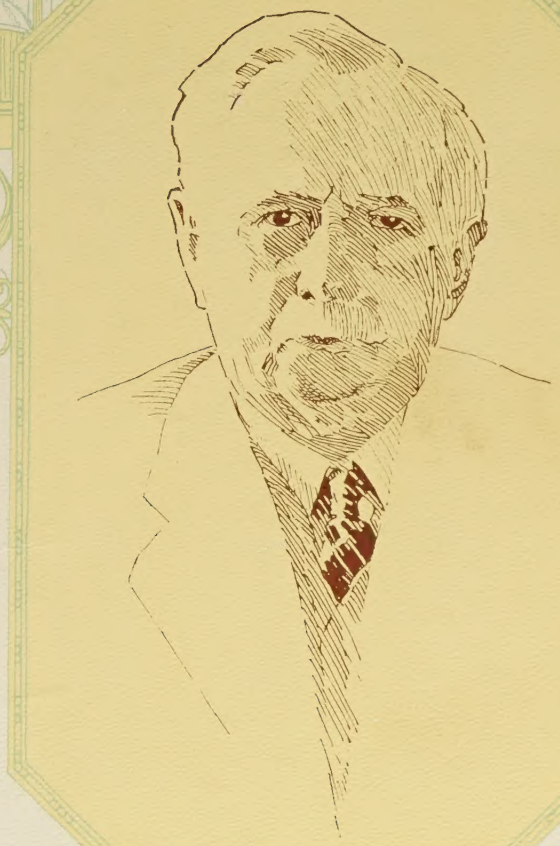
SEATTLE GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY
P. O. BOX 75388
SEATTLE, WA 98125-0388



Dedication

TO DR. ENOCH A. BRYAN, loyal friend and adviser of our Alma Mater, who for 34 years has helped to mould the life of the State College and who has ever maintained the utmost interest in the cause to which he has devoted so much of his lifetime—the growth and progress of Washington State College—the Chinook of '27 is dedicated.

Dedication



Dr. Enoch A. Bryan

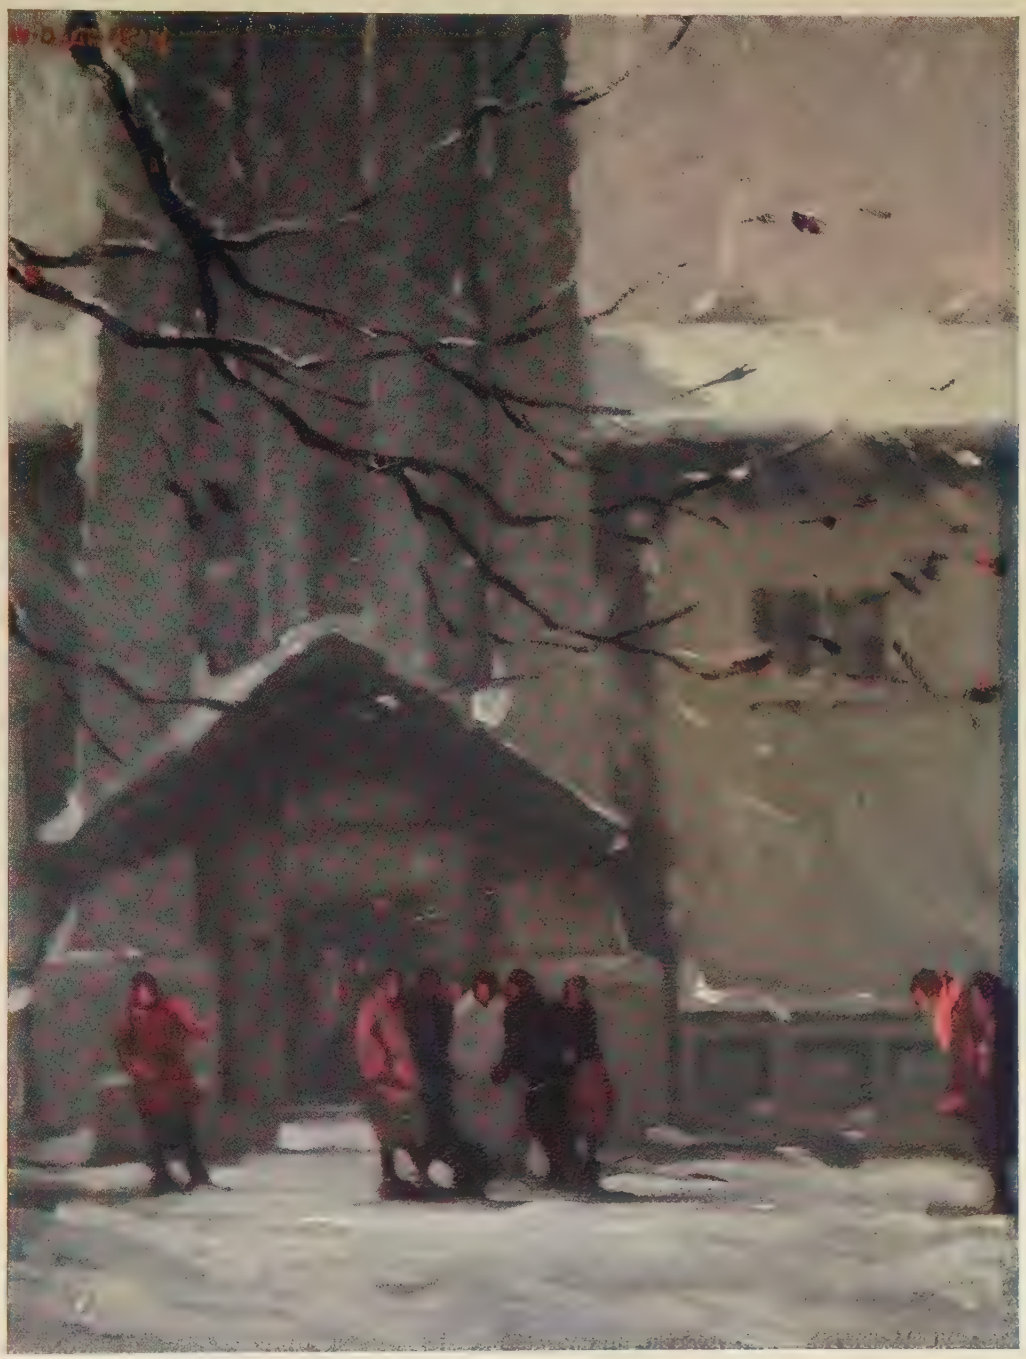
In Memoriam

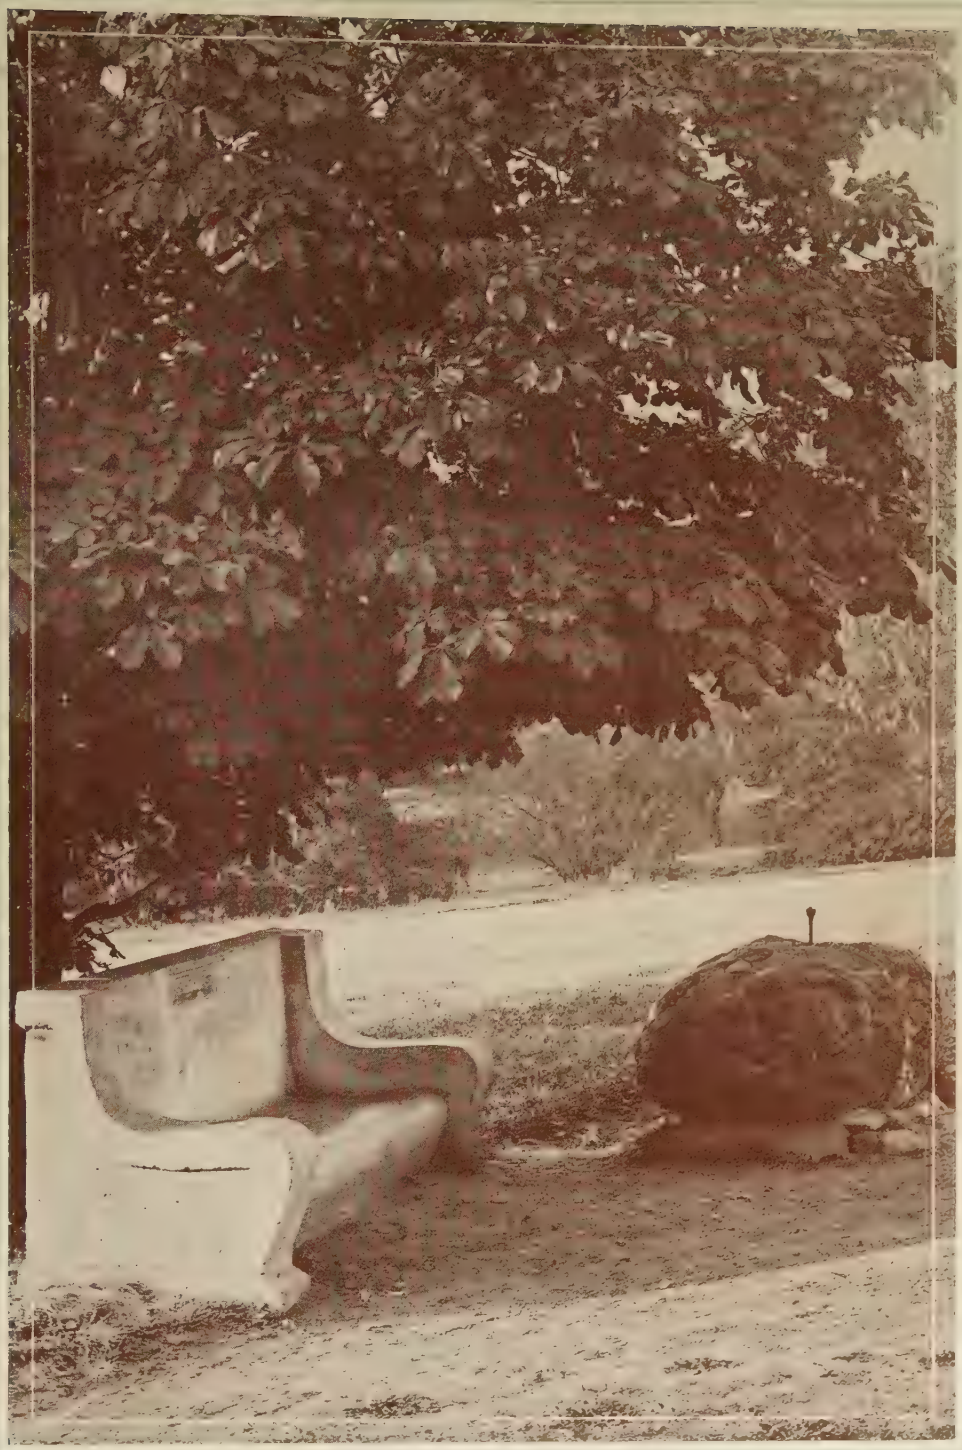
That God, which ever lives and loves,
One God, one law, one element,
And one far-off divine event
To which the whole creation moves.

Velma Elizabeth Collins
Alice E. Linberg

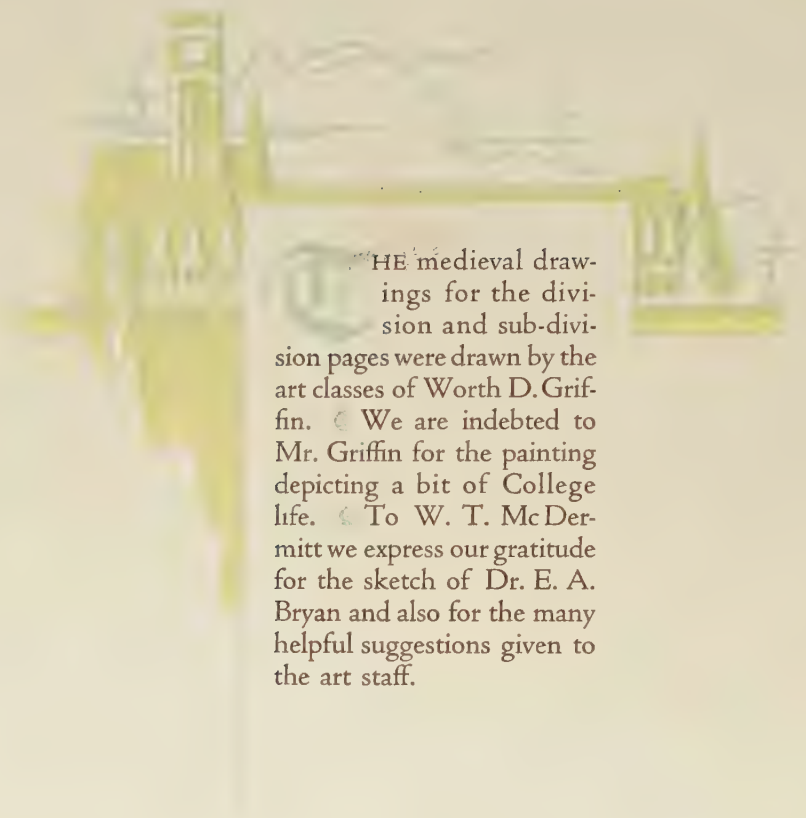
Foreword

IN THE hope that it will keep alive the images and reflections of the past year of our Alma Mater, this book, the Chinook of 27, was made. ¶ Guard carefully the memories you find within its covers, that you may live them again in the years to come.





MUSIC



THE medieval drawings for the division and sub-division pages were drawn by the art classes of Worth D. Griffin. ¶ We are indebted to Mr. Griffin for the painting depicting a bit of College life. ¶ To W. T. McDermitt we express our gratitude for the sketch of Dr. E. A. Bryan and also for the many helpful suggestions given to the art staff.

The career of the class of 1927 has been full of achievements. In their sophomore year they are credited with putting on the "Sophomore Carnival," an attraction showing much talent and splendid co-operation.

Perhaps the outstanding accomplishment of their entire four years was the starting of Junior Week-end, two days crowded with social events honoring the senior class. To the Junior Prom was added the Junior Vodvil, a show of campus talent that was a great success. Junior Week-end has now become one of Washington State's most treasured traditions.

Junior Week-End

The second annual Junior Week-End was held this year April 22 and 23. Both the Prom and the Vodvil were given two nights and each was declared one of the most successful enterprises on the college calendar. The Vodvil included eight acts of clever dances, skits and music. The Prom decoration motif was carried out in Chinese type with changing lights and novel effects.

PRESIDENT E. O. HOLLAND

The New Spirit

By President E. O. Holland

FROM the beginning, the spirit of the State College of Washington has been excellent. The early years of the institution required great faith and courageous spirit on the part of both faculty and students. The scholastic standard of the State College in those days was sound and worthy. And the foundations laid then won for the State College an enviable place in the field of higher education in America.

With the tremendous increase in enrollment during recent years has come the fear that the scholastic standard and the high ideals that should characterize college men and women, might be seriously lowered.

The new spirit of the State College proves that this fear is unfounded. The great majority of our students are serious-minded. They understand that their conduct both on the campus and off it should reflect credit upon this splendid institution. Nearly all of our students are worthy of the confidence placed in them by faculty and parents.

The new college spirit is manifested in high scholastic standards, and by worthy and high-minded conduct that should characterize college-trained men and women.

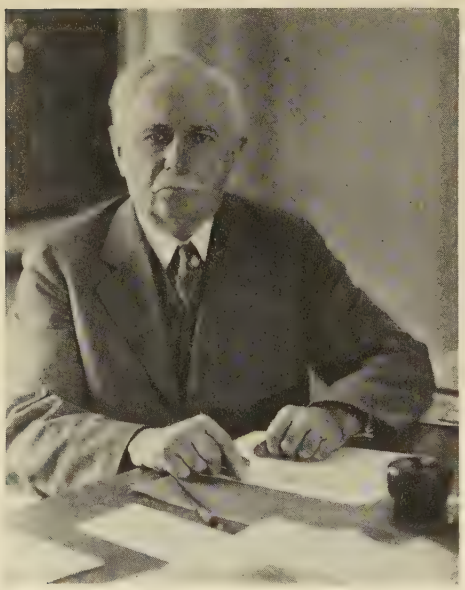
The New Spirit

By Osmar L. Waller
Vice President

THE spirit of the campus is the spirit of youth—the spirit that always wears a smile. College students of today must be told why, not simply when and how. They are earnest young people; they are in college to lay a foundation for a life's work, and are interested in that part of the curricula and extra curricula activities that promise help in a chosen field. They believe that the best of the extra curricula activities promise much for social and professional standing in later life. They believe that a college student has a right to question all beliefs and all teachings. They are seekers after truth and are not willing to take someone else's statement as to what the truth is. The spirit of the campus is the spirit of the scientist, the investigator and the seeker afer truth.

The New Spirit

By Dr. Enoch A. Bryan
President 1893-1916



THE "will to win" is almighty. It cannot forever be defeated. It may lose once. It may lose twice. It may lose thrice. But in the end it will be triumphant. It is indomitable. It is unconquerable.

That new spirit seems to have invaded this campus. We had brilliant flashes of it during the football season. It was in striking contrast with "almost win," "won if it hadn't been for so and so," and a feeling of indifference when we failed—a spirit too often in evidence.

The "new spirit" glories in the past triumphant progress of the college. In the short space of a little over thirty years, the State College has risen from infancy to a place among the great colleges of America. It is the embodiment of the spirit of the new education in its ministry to the welfare of our common humanity. It has played a vital part in the development of the new Northwest with its glorious outlook and the "new spirit" rejoices in the past as well as the present.

The student who has been touched by the "new spirit" stands with uplifted eye and beating heart seeing as in a vision, the possibilities of his own future as well as that of his alma mater and his state and he is eager for the struggle in which he is shortly to engage. His hopes and his courage are high as he goes forward with a new determination and assurance which will lead him to success.

The New Spirit

By Annie M. Fertig
Dean of Women

VICTORY over self is the greatest victory of all. When this is accomplished the world is at one's feet.

This victory includes physical conquest, but greater than this is the mental, and greatest of all the spiritual conquest.

Such conquests should be and are advanced by the training which one may receive at the State College of Washington. Let complete victory be ours.

The New Spirit

By Carl Morrow
Dean of Men

THE "new spirit" at the State College of Washington is characterized by thoughtfulness and vision and good college citizenship.

The students have assumed a collective responsibility for the good sportsmanship which is prevailing in the student homelife, in the classroom, in athletic contests, and in the social life. There is a group consciousness expressing itself in a distinct personal interest in clean living, constructive thinking, and ultimate usefulness. This is potential power which will be intelligently used in its application to world problems.

The "New Spirit" has come to be incorporated into the very soul of the institution and represents a distinct and conscious part of the program of modern education. It exemplifies the faith that the college has placed in the student body.

The New Spirit

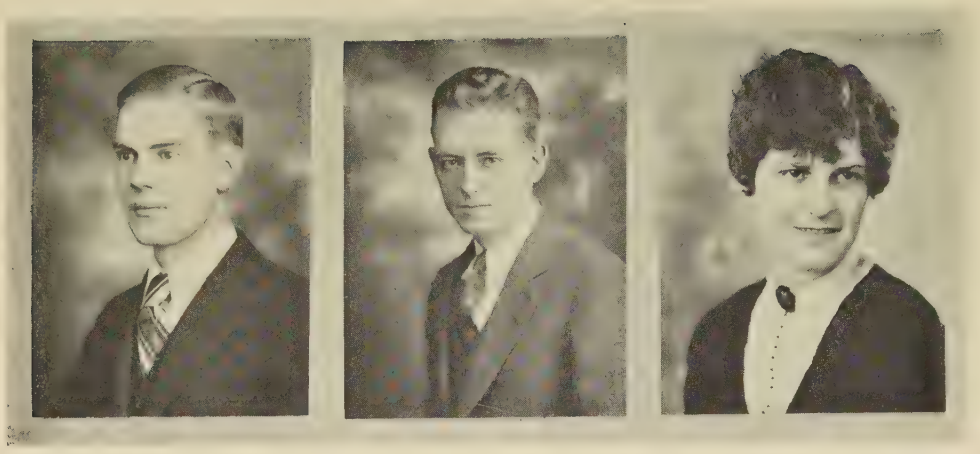
By Earl V. Foster
Graduate Manager

ALL things which are progressive have their backgrounds in new concepts and high ideals. Nothing springs spontaneously from theory or abstractions.

If the "New Spirit" of Washington State College has a broad background, it traces back to the days when the American educational system itself was profoundly affected by a mighty influx of men and women who had just returned from the World War. Cradled in world affairs and impatient of petty restraints, these men powerfully influenced the institutions to which they returned.

Almost overnight, dozens of colleges and universities found that they had burst their swaddling clothes and were emerging as Institutions of the World. Horizons had been lifted, pettiness was disappearing, selfishness and jealousies were passing away.

For our own alma mater, the high tide in these affairs has fallen in the year which is just behind us. The year 1926-27 has seen portentous changes in the spirit and execution of student affairs: In athletics, in collegiate relations, in journalism, music, debate and kindred fields.



BAGEANT MORRIS WALKER

THE A. S. S. C. W.

Every student who is matriculated in the college is a part of the organization known as the Associated Students of the State College of Washington, the governing body of the institution. All student activities and student interests are under the supervision of this association.

The president, who is elected annually from the senior class, presides over the business meetings, which are held twice a month. Other officers are the vice president, secretary, two members-at-large of the Executive Council, editor and business managers of the Evergreen, Chinook, Cougar's Paw, and three members of the Athletic Council. All of these officers with the exception of the managers of the publications, are elected by popular vote.

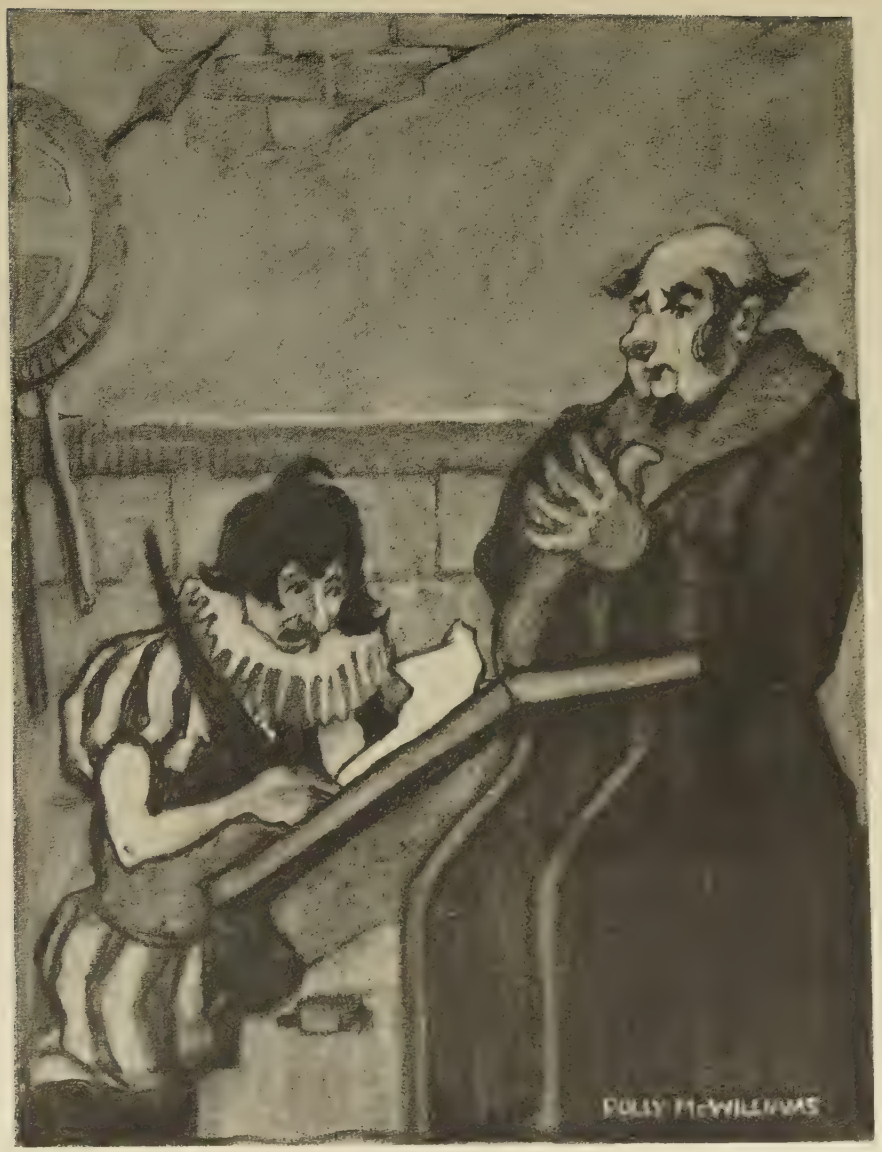
Division of General College Extension

This department offers each year approximately 750 men and women the chance to obtain a college education even though they are unable to attend classes on the college campus. Their needs are met in four ways: Correspondence courses, extension classes, college extension lectures, musical and literary recitals, and educational motion pictures.

Nearly every field of college study at Washington State College is represented in the extension courses sent out daily and the credits earned in these courses may be applied toward a college degree.

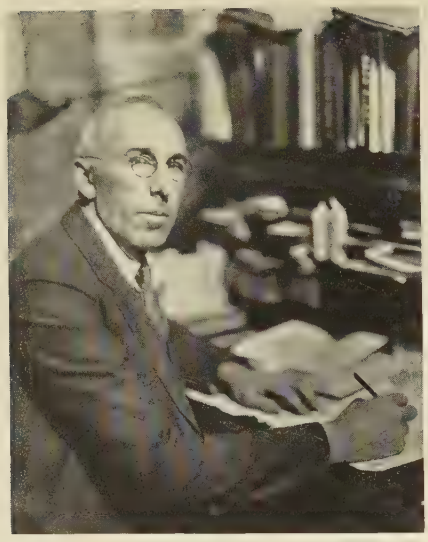
One of the chief needs of the state, contact between the college and the community through direct work, is filled by the college extension department, which, in addition, becomes the official interpreter of the college itself.

Classes are organized over the entire state wherever there is a group of men and women desiring a class in a particular subject or group of subjects. Often a member of the faculty is able to be in direct contact with the workers.



[Schools and Colleges]

College of Engineering



DEAN H. V. CARPENTER

NEARLY everybody interested has taken a try at defining Engineering. A recent attempt by Professor Lucke of Columbia University might help to make it clear. "Engineering, although not a science, is based on the exact sciences of physics, chemistry and mathematics, and in its practice the Engineering method is essentially scientific. It is concerned with utility, with the creation of services and things for public use, especially new kinds, better, more useful, or more economical than were available before. A most absorbing, clean, satisfying and unselfish game, the game of making nature work for man as man works for himself and his fellow-men, the finest and greatest game in the world."

While the engineer must be scientific, he must at the same time be practical. I think everyone knows what practical means. Being practical as an engineer means that the engineer must not overlook any phase of a problem, whether that phase be scientific, economic, psychological or political. He must also eliminate the influence of human prejudices and traditions. The engineer's solution for great undertakings must be satisfactory in all these respects, or it must come as near to being satisfactory all around as anyone can devise, or he has not fully succeeded.

This universality of demand upon the engineer requires that he shall not only know science but know people, must not only be able to use the slide rule, but to be able to speak and write convincingly. Above all he must learn to direct the work of other men effectively.

Engineers who can fulfill these qualifications become managers of great industrial corporations, city managers, directors or investigators of great public works, or as in the case of Mr. Hoover, they are called upon to reorganize and develop governmental bureaus.

From these broader fields the activities of the engineer reach into every type of productive enterprise, including those requiring the highest degree of specialized technical skill, carried on, perhaps, in private laboratories, completely shielded from public contacts.

As Professor Lucke says, "A most absorbing, clean, satisfying and unselfish game, the finest and greatest game in the world."

College of Science and Arts

DEAN C. C. TODD

THE State College of Washington was founded "to promote liberal and practical education." The terms "liberal" and "practical" do not carry the full significance they formerly did, for in these days it is recognized that scientific and technical studies have their cultural value and that education in the liberal arts, worth while for its own sake, is the best preparation for many pursuits, thus having a "practical" value. In the College of Sciences and Arts the courses ordinarily classified under Liberal Arts are offered in the Departments of English, Foreign Languages and Business Administration. The Science Departments are Bacteriology, Botany, Zoology and Chemistry.

Since a knowledge of our own language is so fundamental the work of the Department of English is required of all students. Its major students, on graduation, take up high school teaching or enter on graduate study preparing for writing, for research or for college teaching. Associated with English is the important division of Journalism.

French, Spanish, German and Latin are offered in the Foreign Language Department. Recently Italian and Russian have been added.

The largest department of the College is Business Administration. Besides the work preparing for business pursuits this department includes Secretarial Science, Economics, History, Political Science and Sociology.

Occupying a strategic position because of its relation to health and disease, Bacteriology draws its recruits from among those who expect to devote their lives to medicine and to public health service. Those following Botany as a profession find it a delightful approach to the secrets of nature in the plant kingdom. Botany is one of the sciences basic to agriculture and as such has an important function in our economic structure. The third of the trio of biological sciences is Zoology, the science of life.

Chemistry is another of the sciences essential to modern civilization. Agriculture, Pharmacy, Home Economics, Engineering, are some of the divisions of the College requiring this subject. Major students in the department specialize in one of its three divisions—Chemistry, Chemical Engineering or Agricultural Chemistry.

In addition to the departments enumerated the College of Sciences and Arts includes the Pre-Nursing, Pre-Medical and General courses. The General course is elected by students who are not seeking a degree from any other special department of the College.

In all departments of Sciences and Arts graduate courses are offered leading to the Master's or Doctor's degree.

College of Home Economics

DEAN HARRISON

SHALL college women be trained for wage-earning occupations or for home-making?

The College of Home Economics endeavors to give opportunities for women to prepare for vocations and at the same time for home life.

Opportunities for women trained in Home Economics are abundant. Teaching is perhaps the oldest and best known. Many women are preparing for this field of work. Senior women training in this line teach all the classes of Home Economics in the Pullman High School under supervision, and thereby receive splendid training in teaching under normal conditions. Many women trained in Home Economics are going into educational departments of large business concerns.

In the field of institutional management, the woman with scientific training in nutrition is a comparatively new arrival. The dietician has various opportunities for work in hospitals, tearooms, cafeterias, dormitories and hotels.

The dormitories for women, the Commons, Coffee Shop and special functions offer a good field for practice work in management and administration for those students taking the institutional management course.

Through the passage of the Purnell Act last year, opportunity was given for research work in Rural Home management to be given in connection with the Agricultural Experiment Station. A study of the present use of time by the Farm Homemakers in several sections of the state representing typical agricultural conditions has been started. To further more efficient management of time and to free more time of the farm women for other worth while things is hoped for from this study.

Courses in home furnishing, home management, child care and training place emphasis on these phases of home making. A home management house is maintained where students live in groups of four, one month at a time to get an appreciation of how to manage a home on a definite budget.

An attempt is made to have students elect courses that will enable them to develop an appreciation for the finer things of life, so they will become happy and contented individuals. And to equip them with those ideals which make life worth while. Home making is emphasized as a business or profession worthy of one's best intelligence and efforts.

Mrs. Dwight Newell Hillis in her book, "The American Woman and Her Home," says: "The home is the spring of American civilization and upon its safeguarding depends the permanency of American institutions. It is the task of American women to lift, broaden, strengthen and purify the homes of all classes." Calvin Coolidge has said, "The destiny, the greatness of America lies around the hearthstone. If thrift and industry abound there and the example of self sacrifice oft appears, if honor abide there and high ideals, if there the building of fortune be subordinated to the building of character, America will live in security, rejoicing in abundant prosperity and good government at home and in peace, respect and confidence abroad."

If these things are true, then the College of Home Economics is rendering a real service to the state and nation.

School of Education

DEAN A. A. CLEVELAND

A SURVEY of current discussion of the world's problems reveals the astounding degree to which their solution is dependent upon education, so great that after a half century of leadership one of America's greatest educators recently gave as his valedictory a call to the realization that education has "Now become the chief problem of the world, its one holy cause. The nations that see this will survive and those that fail to do so will slowly perish." He might have added that the task of discriminating between good and evil practices and proposals in education is the most pressing and immediate of the phases of the world's "chief problem."

Upon the pages of history are spread the records of the mistakes of the past. Not a few of them were educational, and they have been expensive. It is therefore with a sense of relief that we are able to see at this critical period in the world's life a new scientific technique and a growing body of scientific principles replacing ignorant though devoted opinion and practices in the field of education. Adequate use of such technique and principles in educational research and the results obtained thereby in the attack upon the great problems of education demands professional training over a period of years, and it is a peculiar function of a school of education to provide such training.

At the State College of Washington the School of Education has organized its work with primary respect to the needs of two classes of students. First, those who intend to enter the profession of teaching, but who are usually inexperienced and undergraduates. Professional courses during college years afford them opportunity to become acquainted with prevailing and prospective objectives and to secure an introduction to the technical aspects of the work of the teacher. These courses lead to the State College Normal Diploma. The second class, made up of teachers already in service who perceive their need of further professional training, is a rapidly growing one.

For them advanced courses and courses dealing with special aspects of education which they are able to appreciate are provided together with opportunities for carrying out researches and investigations. The Life Diploma and the Master of Arts degree are the official rewards for such work, but the increase in professional worth is beyond such simple measurement.

A third class of students is also served who might be regarded as a valuable "by-product." These are they who have no professional interest in education, but see in it a subject that may help them to a better understanding of other problems, or it may be that they wish to know something of a great field of endeavor which should be known to them as citizens and perhaps later holders of public office. An increasing body of such informed citizens must be regarded as a hopeful sign, in view of the statements occurring at the beginning of these lines.

Hamilton, Roberts, Stone, Bryden, Coe, Richardson, Cleveland, Erickson, Ingle.

College of Agriculture

DEAN E. C. JOHNSON

"Of all things from which any gain is obtained, there is nothing better than agriculture, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of man."—CICERO.

THE College of Agriculture had its origin in 1891 when the Agricultural College and the School of Science, later named the State College of Washington, first was organized.

In 1916 the State College was reorganized into schools and colleges and the divisions of the Department of Agriculture were made departments and grouped with the Departments of Horticulture and Forestry into the College of Agriculture. The Department of Plant Pathology was transferred to the College of Agriculture in 1917 and Farm Management, now known as Farm Management and Agricultural Economics, was established as a new department in 1918, making a total of ten departments in the College of Agriculture.

There are fifteen curricula in the College of Agriculture as follows: General Agriculture, Agricultural Business, Farm Crops, Soils, Animal Husbandry, Farm Engineering, Dairy Production, Dairy Manufactures, Plant Pathology, Poultry Husbandry, Horticulture, General Forestry, Range Management, Landscape Gardening, Agricultural Journalism and combined Agricultural-Veterinary Science courses in Animal Husbandry and Dairy Husbandry.

In 1902 there were but two graduates in agriculture. Now the agricultural alumni number more than 500.

The College of Agriculture is housed in two fine buildings—James Wilson

Hall, where most of the class and laboratory rooms are located, and David S. Troy Hall, the dairy manufactures building. Both are class "A" buildings. The former has just been completed in every detail and is new and attractive throughout and the latter is second to none among land grant colleges as a dairy science building.

The college farm of 573 acres is used for experimental and instructional work in Farm Crops, Soils, Horticulture and Plant Pathology. A splendid forest tree nursery is now being developed by the Forestry Department on one section of the farm. The farm is equipped with excellent herds of beef cattle, sheep and hogs housed in up-to-date buildings. The dairy herd of four breeds is outstanding and in 1925 both Holstein and Jersey herds had the highest milk production records of all the agricultural college herds in the country.

The poultry plant is modern in every respect. The flocks of White Leghorns housed here have the highest individual egg laying records and the Rhode Island Reds the highest egg laying flock records of any flocks in the United States.

THE WORK OF THE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

The College of Agriculture equips its students with a well balanced education and prepares them for interesting, useful and remunerative work in the broad field of agriculture and agricultural business. This field is not overcrowded, is broad and inviting and presents an abundance of opportunities to the well trained. The opportunities are on the increase and are likely to be greater for the student of today than at any time during the last fifteen years. Young men and women who are ready to meet them as they come may have every confidence that they will make a good living and an income commensurate with ability and effort expended. In addition they will find large satisfaction in attractive work and in service to the community, to the state and to the nation.

> "The general effect of your colleges has been to raise agriculture to a new standard. It can no longer be associated with a rude and uncultured existence, but has become the occupation of a broadly trained and well educated element in our social structure."—CALVIN COOLIDGE.

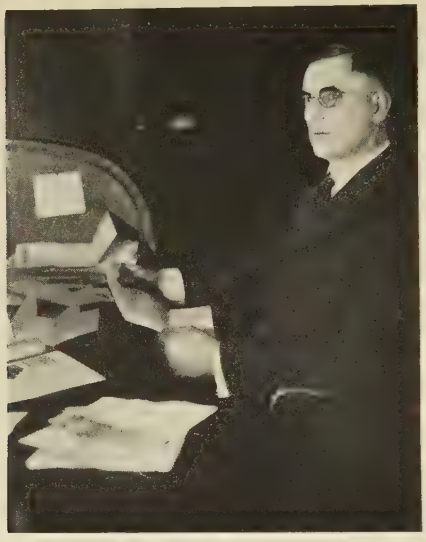
College of Veterinary Medicine



DEAN E. E. WEGNER

THE present status of the veterinary profession is unknown to many. As in a great many other professions, advancement has been unusually rapid, though many people still visualize it as it was fifteen or twenty years ago. It is not difficult to keep pace with the progress of some professions because of the large number of trained men in them, and constantly seeing the activities of these men we become impressed with the progress that their professions have made.

Educational requirements for entering this profession are the same as for engineering, chemistry, agriculture, mining and other professions of like character. The courses in which the student is enrolled while in college are very similar to the courses offered in human medicine. He studies physiology and anatomy to gain a correct conception of the normal structure and function of the various parts of the animal body. Later he studies pathology and bacteriology, and various related subjects to gain a knowledge of the causes and results of disease. Finally, he takes up the work in surgery, diagnosis and study of individual diseases with their symptoms, diagnosis and treatment. After having completed a course of this kind, a man is very well informed in the fundamental sciences and finds that it is possible to market this information in a great number of different ways.

The opportunities for the Graduate Veterinarians are very numerous and attractive, and we see that men with scientific training in subjects relating to animal diseases find important places in our civilization. They are the logical men to be entrusted with the important work of inspecting all food supplies of animal origin, and are employed for this purpose by the United States Army, many municipalities, and by the United States Bureau of Animal Industry. In addition they have the important responsibility of preventing the spread of infectious diseases among our domestic animals, and since our animal population is valued at about eight billion dollars, the responsibility of this work can be estimated. In addition to this disease-control work, veterinarians are employed privately to treat diseases of individual animals and to suppress infectious diseases in local herds or flocks. The work of the private veterinary practitioner is inviting and attracts most of the graduates from the veterinary colleges, because in this activity they have an opportunity to build a business of their own under very agreeable surroundings. The work is neither confining indoor work, nor is it attended with severe outdoor exposure. It is midway between the two, and that factor is very attractive to many. One also has the opportunity to meet many people during the business day, and above all, there is an independence that causes many men to prefer this profession to others. If a man wishes to secure salaried employment, there are many positions for which he may apply, but if he finds it impossible to secure a salaried position, or if he does not desire to do so, the attractive field of practice is always open and ready to absorb him.

The veterinary profession has gravitated to a substantial position among the other professions, and its field of usefulness is now well known and acknowledged by the thinking men of this generation.

School of Music and Fine Arts

DEAN HERBERT SOMERVELL

INTERESTING and inspirational is the field of music as a vocation for the college man or woman. As in other arts, talent is the foundation upon which success is built, and if added to this there is good training, enthusiasm, perseverance and vision, small reason would offer itself for failure.

Music supervision is the most evident field for the major who graduates in public school music. Each year a large percentage of the graduates in this department of the State College find good positions in the public schools of Washington and other states.

Music teaching in small colleges offers an excellent future for those who major in applied music. A number of graduates of the State College have entered this field, and as they gain experience and training, reach toward more important college positions.

Private teaching usually brings excellent returns, and a teacher with the right attitude can build up a large class of pupils in almost any community.

The concert stage, while alluring, offers few opportunities to college students. Only those who have had exceptional musical training for a number of years before entering college should aspire to this goal.

Music education, like that of any other worth while vocation, should never cease with college graduation. Success depends upon the musician's ability to keep continually alive to his profession and to add constantly to his knowledge.

Arthur Middleton, one of America's best known baritones, has stated that his most valuable musical training was received in college. In addition to his voice study, he had unexcelled opportunities for the study of such subjects as musical history, harmony and composition, as well as having access to the broad benefits of a general college education.

The quality of musical training offered by any college depends upon the strength of its faculty. The State College of Washington has for a number of years maintained a faculty which has had the finest of American and European training. A number of its members are concert artists of a high order.

"No state institution in the country has a music faculty with a higher rating than that of the State College of Washington," is the opinion of Charles E. Lutton, Chicago, who is national secretary of Phi Mu Alpha, honorary music fraternity.

The four-year courses of this department all lead toward the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Music. Whether a student wishes to pursue the study of piano, organ, violin, voice or public school music, he will find here a training exceptionally well adapted to his needs. Instruction is also given in orchestral instruments.

Each major in voice and instrumental music is prepared, during his college work, to present a graduation recital. As preliminary experience in public appearance, nearly every student in the department appears at some time or other in the weekly recitals held in the college auditorium. Added to this, there is opportunity for those qualified to become members of one of the two glee clubs, the chorus, the college orchestra or one of the bands.

The student who chooses the field of music as his vocation will find that the State College offers the finest type of training for his life work.

School of Mines and Geology

DEAN A. C. DRUCKER

THE question most frequently asked by the young man who is trying to choose a profession concerns the opportunities that will come to him for profitable employment upon graduation.

The man who graduates in geology, mining, metallurgy or metallography may expect a fair salary at the start, somewhere between $150 and $175 per month. Salaries in the geological, mining or metallurgical profession for experienced men range from $3,000 to $25,000 and upward per year; there are quite a number of experts engaged in this way that are earning very high salaries. The opportunities in a vast mineral industry, consisting of oil, gas, iron, coal, copper, lead, zinc, gold, silver and numerous other metals, and the non-metallics, are certainly most interesting and profitable. It will be increasingly so in the future.

Our school has had a splendid and unusual record among its 104 graduates since 1901. Many of our graduates are occupying high positions as consulting engineers, general managers, mining engineers, geologists and metallurgists all over the earth. The whole world is their field, since American mining capital has penetrated to many parts of the globe to the extent of several billions of dollars. Our field invades the realm of all phases of scientific and engineering knowledge; it has to do with the extraction, preparation and beneficiation of ores, coals, oils, gas, building stone and other minerals.

The State College of Washington, through its School of Mines and Geology, with its well equipped laboratories and strong and experienced faculty is well adapted to educate geologists, mining engineers, metallurgists and metallographists for the great and basic mineral industry; to make of them citizens fitted to undertake responsibilities in public as well as private life.

Our motto to the student and the young man about to enter the profession is: "Keep the mining engineering profession on as high and clean a plane as possible. Let the public know that our profession is not an unfinished one nor a rough one, but that it has its ideals and standards of refinement as well as its ruggedness, force and high leadership." Remember that our profession has ambassadors, statesmen, senators and governors among our ranks. We offer a training for real leadership and a training to meet the ordinary battles of life.

Splendid opportunities await the strong and determined young man about to graduate and enter this broad and worldly profession. The field is far from being overcrowded; the demand is unusually good.

School of Pharmacy

DEAN P. H. DIRSTINE

THE School of Pharmacy is recognized as one of the ten leading Schools of Pharmacy in the United States and is thoroughly up-to-date in its work. In conformity with the advancement of educational requirements the school offers three courses. One, leading to the degree of Ph. C., Pharmaceutical Chemist, and the other two, to the degrees of Ph. C. and B. S., Pharmaceutical Chemist and Bachelor of Science, representing respectively the three-year and the four-year courses. The three-year course fits one for several different kinds of pharmaceutical work, such as retail pharmacist, traveling salesman, clerk, wholesale drug work and certain fields in pharmaceutical chemistry. Two four-year courses are offered: First, the four-year pharmacy and business course, and second, the four-year combination pharmacy and pre-medicine course. In the pharmacy and business course the work is so arranged that the student gets all the work in pharmacy together with the essential business courses required for the intelligent owning and operating of a drug business. This course fits one, in a most excellent way, for all the phases of the retail or wholesale drug trade, for the teaching of pharmacy, for a laboratory technician in private and government laboratories, as well as a position in the Army, Navy and Civil Service of the United States government, as a pharmaceutical chemist and all forms of pharmaceutical work.

The four-year course combining Pharmacy and Pre-Medicine is one of the most logical and useful courses offered in this field. Beside covering all the pharmacy work, it fits the student for entrance to the best medical colleges of the country. As pharmacists are always in demand in the large cities in which medical students are located, it offers the pre-medical student, who has a training and degree in pharmacy, a greater opportunity, by far, to work his way through the medical school, than is offered by any other college course. It not only aids the student during his college work in the study of medicine, but aids him in a thousand different ways in his daily practice of medicine throughout his life as a physician.

In addition to the courses as outlined above, advanced graduate work is offered, leading to the degree of M. S., Master of Science. The school is perhaps the best equipped with research apparatus and equipment for giving advancd work of any School of Pharmacy in the west.

The enrollment of the School of Pharmacy has been growing constantly, having one of the largest, if not the largest percentage increases, of any division of the college. The total number of enrolled students in major pharmacy courses for the year 1925 numbered one hundred and seventy-five.

The demand for graduates of the School of Pharmacy at the State College has constantly exceeded the supply. The success of the graduates has been marked. During the past four years approximately 160 graduates of this school have taken the Washington and other state board examinations. Out of this number only three persons have failed to pass. For the past two years, out of 78 graduates, not a one has failed to pass the examination. The average failure of all candidates before state boards throughout the country is higher than 50 per cent. It is doubtful if the record made at the State College has been equaled by any other institution.

The purpose of the School of Pharmacy has always been to cooperate in every way with the pharmacists of the state and to offer the most practical and efficient training in pharmacy that it is possible to give.

Department of Physical Education and Athletics

DR. J. F. BOHLER

PHYSICAL EDUCATION—MEN

PHYSICAL Education is one of the things we read and talk about a great deal, but which we seldom practice to the best of our knowledge. Each succeeding generation will need stronger bodies and better trained minds than did folks of an earlier day, for they must be able to earn more to meet our ever rising standards of living than did any past generation, and they will also be called upon to make larger contributions to the community and national life outside of regular working hours htan did their forebears. To meet these increasing demands upon time and strength definite individual effort must be expended. To increase physical efficincy all along the line is the purpose of this department.

The gymnasium now in progress of construction will enable us to carry out a program more fully than we have ever done before. It will fill a long felt need.

The building will measure 170 by 200 feet. The main floor, 100 by 165 feet, will be large enough for three regulation size basketball courts, permitting three games to be played simultaneously.

The basement, which will be entirely above ground, will house the swimming pool, the hand ball and squash courts, the lockers, the dressing rooms for the various varsity and freshman teams, for visiting teams, and for the faculty, the laundry, storage and athletic equipment room. On the mezzanine floor in the basement will be the wrestling, boxing, fencing and class rooms. On the second floor there will be an auxiliary gymnasium, 27 by 117 feet, the gun rack rooms, a golf room, a club room and several small special exercise rooms.

With the completion of the new gymnasium we shall be able to carry out a well rounded program. It will then be possible for every student to engage daily in some form of physical activity, either indoors or outdoors. With the addition of an orthopedic gymnasium and orthopedic equipment, we shall be able to do more corrective work than we have done heretofore. A modern swimming pool will add another interesting sport to our list. Hand ball and squash courts will permit indulgence in those popular pastimes. Add to these outdoor sports—golf, tennis, baseball, the track and field events—we feel we shall have some form of exercise or recreation to offer every on.

GENEVIEVE BARBER

PHYSICAL EDUCATION—WOMEN

THE Department of Physical Education for Women offers a four-year course of study which leads to the Bachelor of Science degree. The aim of the department is to train young women for positions as instructors of physical education and as playground supervisors and also to provide a program of gymnasium courses and athletics for all women students enrolled in the college.

Besides the theoretical courses, the curriculum of the department includes hockey, fieldball, tennis, volleyball, interpretative dancing, formal gymnastics, apparatus, basketball, baseball, track and field, riding, rifle and archery. The last named proved so popular last year that more equipment had to be ordered.

This summer one of the dreams of the department is to be realized. A short course in campcraft and camp leadership is to be offered at Camp Sweyolaken, the Camp Fire Girls' camp on Coeur d'Alene Lake. Here there will be opportunities for swimming, diving, life-saving, canoeing, as well as land sports, handcraft, camp cooking and lectures on related subjects. One hour of college credit will be given for satisfactory completion of the work.

In the fall of 1926 there were 805 students taking required work in the department as contrasted with 751 of last year. Students majoring in Physical Education number 59 for 1926-27, as compared with 47 in 1925-26.

It is the desire of the department to make the work as attractive as possible to the students, in the hope that activities enjoyed during college years may carry over into the life of the individual after leaving school. Students are, therefore, allowed to elect whatever sport they desire.

Intramural games between class teams, in all the major sports, are played each year. Besides this, the department presents a May Fete on Women's Day and a Dance Drama, which is given early in the spring by the students in the Interpretative Dancing classes. The Dance Drama this year was entitled "The Fantastique," based on Oscar Wilde's "Birthday of the Infanta."

Harold "Ox" Hansen

J. F. Bohler Medal

With the completion of his three years of varsity football competition last fall, Harold "Ox" Hansen received the highest token of respect his team-mates could accord him—the J. F. Bohler Medal for being the greatest inspiration to the men on the squad.

Hansen at tackle has been one of the mainstays on Cougar grid machines since his freshman year, and during his career in the inter-collegiate game has been named on several All-Coast teams.

Sickness or pain have never kept the likeable, big blonde from playing the game to the utmost of his ability. It was this grit, along with his genial disposition, which inspired the men on the team to give all they had for victory. Dr. J. F. Bohler first presented the medal in 1921, at the same time procuring a permanent cup on which is engraved the name of the man who receives the award. These are the men who are possessors of the medal:

1921 Milo McIver.	1924 Marvin Hales.
1922 Ford Dunton.	1925 Bill Kramer.
1923 John Zaephel.	1926 Harold Hansen.

Bohler Medal

Orin "Babe" Hollingbery

Coach O. E. Hollingbery came to Washington State College at the start of the 1926 season. After successful coaching in California high schools and as head coach of the Olympic Club in San Francisco he entered the conference untried in college coaching.

At a school where football had been on the down-grade for several years and the student body had lost nearly all spirit, and with a comparatively green squad, he molded a team that was feared the length of the coast. By the sheer force of his personality he created a new spirit on the campus and in the team, so that the Cougars of 1926 were known for their fighting spirit.

Football at Washington State had been in the slumps for so long that many critics viewed the situation pessimistically when a coach new in college work took over the huge task of bringing our team to the fore.

The first conference game of the season was played against one of the strongest teams in the conference. Although we lost by a low score, the team learned what power they had and from then on the slate remained clean.

With the new instilled spirit, the team went out under the face of odds with dope against them and came out at the end of the season second in conference ratings. With the Hollingbery system firmly established and the best outlook in years for material, next fall Washington State should again enjoy the position as a leader in Coast Conference football.

"Buck" Bailey came to Washington State with Hollingbery as head baseball coach and as "Babe's" assistant in football. He played both football and baseball at Texas A. and M., from where he received his degree.

Thoroughly versed in the Hollingbery system from playing under "Babe" at the Olympic Club as a lineman, he makes an able assistant and line coach, and he did much last year toward building the best team that State has had in years.

With fair material this year in the way of a baseball team, "Buck" has already rounded out a line-up that will make a strong bid for the championship.

A. B. "Buck" Bailey

Wilbur Bohm

Wilbur Bohm is the new trainer for Washington State's athletic teams, assistant varsity track coach, and instructor in the Department of Physical Education. "Doc" is a former University of Idaho star, having attended there is 1915 and 1916, where he was a member of the track and football teams, holding enviable records in each.

Following his two years at Idaho he attended the American School of Osteopathy for four years, where he received his D. O. degree. At this time he held both the Missouri Valley and St. Louis Municipal Championships in the shot and discus for two successive years, and was National A. A. U. Champion in the latter. Since that time he has been a member of the Missouri and Illinois Athletic Clubs.

We are proud to have "Doc" with us and feel that he has created a permanent place in our minds for all time.

Gray "W" Club

Founded by the letter men of Washington State February 7, 1916, the Gray "W" Club was organized to cultivate a greater cooperative interest in athletics, and for the purpose of promoting a closer union among members of the various branches of sports. Every man winning his athletic award is entitled to membership in the club.

The organization sponsors various athletic contests with the aid of other clubs, for high schools and officiates in the competitive sports when they are held. One of the largest events held annually is the State Track and Field Meet which takes place the latter part of May. At this time complete supervision, from the housing and feeding to the athletic events, is cared for by the members.

At all times the club is in readiness to give information regarding the athletic status of the State College, and strives to interest high school students in this department as well as to advertise the innumerable other possibilities offered.

W. S. C. 35—COLLEGE OF IDAHO 0

That Washington State College was a name to be thoroughly considered in the 1926 football year, was easily seen in the first game of the season against the College of Idaho, October 2.

In the first play of the tilt, "Butch" Meeker hurdled through the center of the line for 38 yards and a touchdown. The powerful Cougar forward wall had opened a hole in the opposing line big enough for a wagon. When the varsity had had its fun and registered a 35-0 score, Coach Hollingbery sent in his second string to test their worth. Even then, the Coyotes were hard-pressed to hold their own against the powerful, lunging drives of the Crimson and Gray line and backs.

Proving their claim to having one of the best lines on the coast, Washington State journeyed to Los Angeles, October 9, and held the widely-heralded Trojan team to a 16-7 score. This was no mean feat on the part of the little band of Cougars, for the Southern California eleven was out to run up a high score and even accounts for the defeat handed them in 1925.

Three times during the course of the fray the smashing California backs had the ball on the Staters' five-yard line only to be held by the dogged strength and determination of the boys from the north. The Cougars were out to show the huge crowd packed in the Coliseum that they were there to win back some of the laurels they had lost since 1921 and to taste of victory for the second successive time. The ovation they received at the end of the struggle was a testimonial as to how well they had achieved their purpose.

The Trojans gained their tally by two touchdowns and a safety. State's touchdown came in the final quarter, when big Dan Horan smashed his way through the California center and planted his cleats over the goal-line.

Kramer, Dils, Hansen and Spiedel were the bulwarks on the line, while Horan and Meeker shared the limelight in the backfield.

Playing in a pouring rain which handicapped State's open style of football, the Cougars made the Montana Grizzly take to the woods with few or no scratches, by a 14 to 6 count, Saturday, October 16.

Relying wholly upon "straight" football and attempting but two passes, the first 59 minutes remained featureless until "Wild Bill" Kelley, Montana quarter, broke away for Montana's first score against W. S. C. in four years.

Washington State's forward-wall more than lived up to its reputation by stopping Montana's jabs from all angles. Exley and Parkhill, at left and right end, ruined many plays, while Smith at guard and Speidel at tackle starred with their powerful offensive. In the backfield Meeker directed the team in his usual Napoleonic manner, with Rohwer in the opposite star role with his long gains through and around the line.

W. S. C. 9—U. OF W. 6

Inspired by a "never-say-die" spirit, ground into them by a coach who practiced what he preached, a determined band of Crimson and Gray warriors traveled to Seattle October 23 and shattered all hopes of a conference championship for Washington by beating them 9 to 6. It was the first time since 1921 that Cougar cleats had written "Victory" all up and down the University bowl.

The dream of every Stater was only realized after one of the toughest football battles ever waged between the two traditional rivals. The score was 6 to 2 in favor of Washington at the end of the half. The throngs in the stand were confident of another Husky win, but the boys from the eastern part of the state knew that it was their day to whip the sledge-dog.

In the second half the Cougars fought like men gone mad—their time had come! Gustafson was called on to pack the oval down the field, and pack it he did. For 40 yards the stocky fullback plunged and battered his way through the far-famed Washington forward wall until the ball rested on the Purple and Gold 10-yard line. From there Meeker, the ever-alert field general, faked a play through center and carried the pigskin around right end for the winning touchdown. He also converted the try-for-point. Washington was vanquished.

As in all the previous games of the season, the diminutive Meeker was the flashing star. His ability to kick field-goals and skirt the ends was excelled only by the wonderful manner in which he inspired and piloted his team. Rohwer, halfback, also was a big factor in determining the final result of the struggle.

On the line Dressel was the outstanding figure. In every play one might see the big tackle tearing in and scattering interference aside to nail the runner. Parkhill at end played his best game of the season and discouraged all intentions on the part of the Huskies to get around his end of the line.

With the educated toe of little "Butch" Meeker functioning in great style in spite of the slithering mud which formed MacLean Field, Washington State defeated Idaho on November 6, by a margin of two field goals. This was the first time a Cougar grid machine had rolled over the Vandals since 1922.

Washington was doped to win from the outset, but the condition of the field at Moscow made good football an impossibility. At that, statistics show that the Staters completely outplayed their opponents, making seven first downs to three for the Silver and Gold, while the Cougar backs crashed through the line for a total of 181 yards to 80 for their opposition.

Meeker made both field goals in the first quarter and from then on it was just a matter of fighting the ball up and down the field in vain attempts at a touchdown. Washington State's line was the biggest determining factor of the game. Time after time they withheld the attacks of their heavier opponents and stopped the backs dead in their tracks. Dressel, Smith and Kramer were the rocks of the line, while Meeker, Rohwer and Gustafson carried the burden in the backfield.

Playing on a field soaked to saturation by a three-day downpour, Washington State showed more submarine qualities than the Oregon Ducks by towing them into port, 7 to 0, Homecoming Day, November 13. Disregarding "open" football altogether, the Cougar gridsters outclassed their fleet rivals three to one in yardage, but not until the closing minutes of the second quarter were they able to cross the Lemon-Yellow line. A succession of line plays, with a criss-cross, carried the oval from the 33-yard chalk mark within 10 yards of the goal, where a plunge by Gustafson followed by Koenig gave Rohwer the opportunity to register. Meeker was the other "big" man of the quartet. Besides converting the try-for-point, he never failed to make more than his share of the yardage with several gains ranging from 10 to 15 yards.

For the first time in 1926 Oregon failed to score in the first half, and Cougar supporters can be proud for following a team that emerged in conference circles with but one defeat, after a three-year depression.

Thanksgiving Day in Spokane saw the closing of more than a successful season when Washington's Turkey-Day warriors ate Bulldog meat for the first time in four years. Gonzaga, subdued 7 to 0, saw a greater difference than the score indicated when the final summary showed 234 yards for State and 77 for themselves. It was in the third quarter that the lone score of the day was registered, when Rohwer crashed over tackle for two yards and a touchdown, after each man in the Cougar backfield had contributed on the drive to the goal.

Several gridsters donned their football togs for the last time for Washington State. Koenig and Sweet finished a three-year term at half, Hansen gave his last in collegiate football at tackle, while Smith and Kramer at right and left guard added more laurels to their crowns in their final fracas of three years of varsity competition. Kramer was selected by critics and sport authorities for All-Coast guard, and chosen for the annual East-West battle on New Year's Day in California. Playing the entire game, he was one of the main cogs of the West machine in defeating the East, 6 to 0.

Ed Wilkerson assumed the responsibilities of football manager for the 1926 season. Taking hold of his duties in a conscientious manner, he organized the work and started it in the right direction. He had complete charge of equipment, general field work, and supervised housing and feeding of players on trips. With a number of class managers and assistants, Wilkerson aided Coaches "Babe" Hollingbery and "Buck" Bailey greatly in the rounding into form of State's "victory" team.

1926 Frosh Football

Success was written all over the yearling football season as the Cougar Kittens captured the Northwest Championship. Under the guidance of the new mentor, Coach Carl Schlademan, the Babes made every game a success in the development of the Hollingbery system for future varsity.

The opening game was a non-conference affray with Cheney Normal on Rogers Field. Inexperience on the part of the frosh and a last quarter rally by the Teachers netted the Normal a 13 to 12 victory.

A trip to Missoula for the first conference tilt brought back a 26 to 3 win from the Montana Grizzly Cubs. Ward's end runs and Exley's line smashes in the second half returned the frosh the major part of their score.

The Idaho frosh came over to Pullman to take a 9 to 7 beating that might have been anybody's. Washington made their touchdown in the last three minutes of play. Idaho fumbled on their own 20-yard line, Washington recovered, and with a series of passes and line bucks the ball went over for the winning touchdown against their heavier rivals.

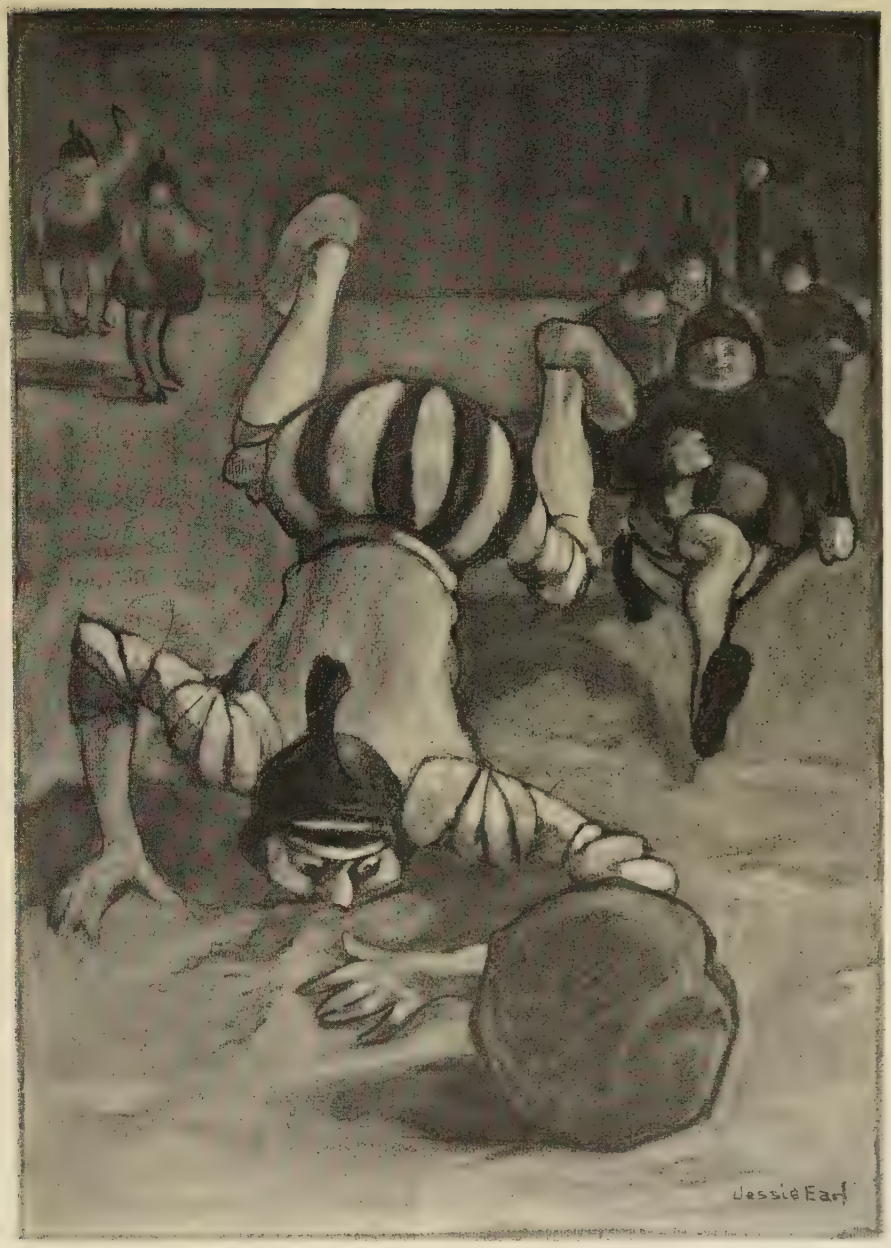
Blum Hart Rogers

A successful year of athletic achievements can be traced to the work of Yell King Jimmy Hart, and Dukes George Rogers and Joe Blum. It is the first time in Washington State's history that team work in yell-leading has developed a smooth, consistent department of cheering. Much success of the athletic contests, especially football, can be placed on those three who instilled a fighting spirit into those who were giving their utmost for the State College, and led the student body in conveying their own thoughts of appreciation to the wearers of he Crimson and Gray.



[Basketball]

Karl Schlademan

Karl Schlademan, who came to Washington State as head track and basketball coach in the fall of 1926, is a graduate of De Pauw University. Following his graduation he coached at Missouri Wesleyan College, University of Arizona and Baker University, from there taking up duties at the University of Kansas as football line coach, head track director and assistant basketball mentor. Although more or less specializing in track, being captain of his Alma Mater team in 1911, he also proved his worth in football by being chosen as All-State and All-Western end in 1910.

Taking charge of the Cougar hoop aspirants, Coach Schlademan started his task of building a team with the nucleus of four first-year lettermen. Introducing a completely novel system of play, a team was put on the floor that ended the season far above what was expected by critics. With eight lettermen back for the ensuing year a quintet nothing short of championship calibre is expected, judging from the finish of the 1926-27 season.

Starting his fall duties as frosh football coach, a team was developed which came through the season with but one defeat, to a non-conference school, and finished as conference champions. With track well under way an enviable record is expected. Coach Schlademan has never failed to have a representative to the Olympics from the several teams he has tutored, and already appearances are pointing towards a similar result for Washington State.

PRE-SEASON GAMES

The game with Montana State marked the opening of the season for the W. S. C. basketball squad. The first of a group of non-Conference games against Montana State was played in the home gymnasium, to the tune of a 38-35 run for the Cougars. The following night we again beat them, this time with a score of 33-26. These two games were pronounced to be two of the season's best. In the first, Henry and Clay tied for high honors with 10 each. Brumbley starred in the second with nine tallies. Christmas vacation the Pullman dribblers went on a barnstorming tour, practicing against Gonzaga in their gym and playing three games. In the first the home outfit suffered a loss from the Sparklers, score, 29-17. The next game against the Coeur d'Alene Elks was a 23-10 victory for State. In both of these games, Paul was high man. The third victory game was a return game with the Spokane Sparklers, which the Cougars copped, 29-20. Brumblay was high with 10 points.

CONFERENCE OPENING

The first conference game of the season, played here against the University of Montana, resulted in a 33-18 win for the Cougars. The first half was slow, with W. S. C. consistently breaking up Montana's faster ball, with both teams playing a better brand featured the second half, but the Grizzlies were unable to overcome the Cougars' early lead. The game ended with W. S. C. on the long end of a 33-18 score. Paul was high-point man with 14 points. The record game with Montana was played at Missoula and the Grizzlies proved to be much stronger on their home floor. The teams were tied near the end. Rohwer featured with long shots for State and Overturf displayed uncanny shooting ability for Montana. The gun sounded with a score of 31-28 for W. S. C. Clay was high-point man. The second conference game in the home gym was against Oregon. This game was the first defeat by a conference team. It was a fast game and the Cougars were apparently unable to find the basket. The game ended with a score of 31-14. The next game was with the University of Idaho at Moscow and spelled disaster for our neighbors. The Cougars came back strong to win over Idaho's first half lead of 16-9. This game was considered one of the best games of the season and featured hard, fast ball. Brumblay was high-point man with eight points to his credit. Score, 26-23.

COAST TOUR

The Cougars' coast tour opened at Seattle on February 5, against the University of Washington quintet. It was a poor game, with neither team playing to form. The University led, 17-11, at the end of the first half and won the game, 39-16. For the "U," Schuss was high man with 12 points, and Rohwer was high for State with four points. The next game was with O. A. C. at Corvallis and this game we also lost with a score of 30-19. The Cougars led at the end of the half, 11-8. In the second half, the two teams were tied twice. In the last five minutes of the session, O. A. C. came out with fast, accurate shooting and plays which the Staters could not seem to break up. Burr, O. A. C. guard, was high man of the game with 10 points. For the Cougars Clay and Henry tied with six points apiece. Traveling on to Eugene, the Cougars again suffered defeat from the University of Oregon. The first ten minutes of the conflict promised a hard fight for both teams. Oregon then opened up and swamped the invaders. Okerberg of Oregon was high man of the game with 20 points, and Brumblay for the Washington State team, with eight points.

FINAL HOME SERIES

On February 12 the University of Washington quintet came to Pullman for a return game. In a rather slow contest, they repeated their previous run, again beating W. S. C., this time with a score of 29-23. Snyder, of the Huskies, was high man with eight points. The next game was with O. A. C. on the local floor. This was one of the outstanding games of the season, both teams playing hard, fast ball. O. A. C., using the percentage style of playing, played on an even basis the first part of the game, neither team being able to score and in the last part, both teams showered the basket. Gilleland and Rohwer were outstanding players for State, making brilliant shots for State. Burr of O. A. C. was high man of the game with 10 points to his credit. Score, 22-21, O. A. C.

The next to the last game of the season was against the Idaho Vandals and was played on the W. S. C. court. In a slow and interesting game, in which the Idaho men would not come out of their shells, Idaho won 21-15. Averill registered with seven points. The last game of the season, against Whitman, was a thriller from start to finish. Clay starred with 12 points, while Gilleland and Averill each made nine. It was a W. S. C. victory, 35-22.

At the beginning of the season Jeff Beeman was appointed manager for the ensuing year, and his duties were well cared for in that capacity. Assisting Coach Schlademan in the care of the team and equipment while on trips and at home, he made a commendable record for the second year of the managerial system in basketball.

The close of the 1926-27 basketball season found the Cougar Kittens at the head of the score sheet. With a total of seventeen games played, the Babes finished with but four defeats. Under the direction of Coach "Hal" Orion, who is experiencing his first year at the State College, a team was developed that will go far in making the varsity this coming season.

The regular quintet consisted of Buckley and McDonald as forwards; Mitchell, center, and Gough and Newsham as the mainstays for the guard positions. Other numeral winners were Abbeal, Rasmussen, Sherar and Tompkins.

Intramural Basketball

By a display of clever floor-work and accurate shooting, Alpha Tau Omega defeated Theta Chi by a 19-9 score in the final game of the round-robin tournament and cinched the intramural basketball championship for 1926-27. Although the score was rather one-sided both aggregations were in there fighting from the opening whistle and furnished the spectators with thrills galore.

This contest culminated one of the most successful intramural hoop tournaments held at Washington State for years. Chiefly responsible for the great interest aroused in the tilts was the manner in which the league was arranged. The twenty-four teams entered were divided into four divisions of six teams each and the winners of the separate divisions were pitted against each other in a grand elimination tourney.

The Physical Education Department sponsored the contests under the direct supervision of Hal Orion.

Interscholastic Basketball Tournament

Under the supervision and sponsorship of Crimson Circle, the State College of Washington held its first intercholastic basketball tourney. Eight teams were present for the South-Eastern Washington district meet, and over 75 contestants were cared for during the two and a half days of elimination play. The teams finished in first and second places, being eligible for the state tournament held at the University of Washington.

With two losses eliminating, the semi-final round was played between Walla Walla and Endicott, which Wa-Hi won comparatively easy, 28 to 16. The other was between Clarkston and Tekoa. Although Clarkston was completely outclassed in the first half, they came back with a renewed fighting spirit to hold Tekoa to three points, tying the score and winning the game in the last half minute when Lindstrom, Clarkston's star forward, looped one from past the foul lane. Walla Walla and Clarkston battled for top honors that night with Wa-Hi quintet annexing the larger end of a 33 to 19 score. Bramhall was easily the star of the tournament with his consistent shooting from all angles. In the five games played he averaged nearly twelve points for each, and was Walla Walla's biggest factor in taking the tourney.

Following are the teams that were champions for their district or county and who competed: Anatone, Clarkston, Endicott, LaCrosse, Prescott, Pullman, Tekoa and Walla Walla.

Coach Harry "Hack" Applequist

After four successful years as varsity baseball coach, Harry "Hack" Applequist resigned his position at the close of the 1926 season. Starting on the upward-climb in collegiate league circles his first year, "Hack" developed a team to be feared, and with the majority of the same lettermen back the following spring a team was put into the race that ended the season with the pennant flying over Washington State that designated the Northwest Conference Championship.

Losing nearly all of the victory nine by graduation, the third year found another new aggregation inexperienced on the diamond, but with the same determination Coach Applequist entered a team that was able to finish with a percentage well over .500. The fourth debut on the diamond was apparently in the same direction as the second, and after a close race with the State University a top-notch second was the final result, this being determined after a three-game series, the Cougars taking the first by a large score and losing the deciding two.

In appreciation of Coach Applequist's determination, excellent sportsmanship, and interest in the State College, the Associated Students presented him with an engraved watch, which can only partly symbolize the memories he leaves.

Last year the Pacific Coast Conference instituted the ruling that the Northern section of the conference should be divided into two leagues for future baseball games. The western half includes O. A. C., University of Washington and the University of Oregon. In the eastern half are Washington State College, University of Idaho and the University of Montana. At the end of the season the champions of the two leagues play a three-game series for the title of the Northern section of the conference. Under the coaching of Harry "Hack" Applequist the Cougars put a strong team in the field. Although under-rated by the dopesters of this section, the States soon showed that they had championship qualities. Ten lettermen answered the call of the diamond. On the mound were five veteran twirlers, Weingarten, E. Mitchell, Nollan, Becker and Highton. Tad Richards was at his old corner on the initial sack, while his running mate, Shelby, was opposite him on third. In his accustomed place behind the bat stood Curry Mitchell, while in the outer-gardens Marker and Berg were working together. Exley, Meeker and Colvin proved to be the better for the other vacant positions.

The Cougars opened the 1926 baseball season by winning two straight from Cheney Normal. Both teams were weak with the willow and their fielding slow and ragged. Next on the pre-conference schedule came Gonzaga. The Cougars came through this two-game series in fine style, winning both games 9 to 5. It was apparent that neither team had hit its stride.

son against Idaho. State hopes fell a little after a four to three defeat at the hand of "Lief" Erickson. He was given fast support in the field and this prevented the Cougars from bringing in more than three runs. Although Becker allowed one less hit, the Vandals were able to take advantage of State's few errors. The following day the Idaho battery, Fields and Stockdale, was unable to stop the hard-hitting Cougars, who carried the day 12 to 1. "Lefty" Mitchell allowed only eight hits, while air-tight fielding on the part of the Staters kept the Vandals from bringing in more than one run.

HIGHTON
Second Year—Pitcher

In the final two-game series with Idaho the Cougars again divided with the Vandals. For the second time in the season Erickson's stellar pitching saved the day for the Silver-Gold. The final score was 7 to 4. The next day Fields and Stockdale again failed to hold the slugging Staters. Mitchell, Weingarten and Becker were on the mound for the Cougars in these two games.

The four-game series with Whitman resulted in a "split" series. Both teams displayed fast ball and were hitting freely. Whitman won her two games by 5 to 2 and 8 to 5 scores, W. S. C. taking hers by 6 to 2 and 3 to 2 counts.

By knocking Montana twirlers all over the lot, the Cougars took four games from the Grizzlies, two at Missoula and two at Pullman. Mitchell, Weingarten, Nollan and Becker twirled for the Staters, allowing the Grizzly team only a minimum of hits. The scores were 16 to 5, 12 to 3, 11 to 6, and 7 to 4. By winning the last two games the Cougars were tied with Idaho for first place in the Eastern league. This made it necessary for the two schools to play a three-game series for the championship.

Staters poling seventeen runs to eight for Idaho. Becker, Weingarten and Highton were responsible for the chucking in these games. Winning these two games gave the Staters the chance to play the University of Washington for the championship of the Northern section.

At Seattle, the Cougars hit everything that was delivered and won the first game, 17 to 6. Highton bearing the brunt of the burden in the box, the second day saw the tables reversed but with a lower score, 13 to 2. Battling for the Northwest conference, with the series evenly divided, both teams were set on the deciding game. Although practically an equal number of hits were garnered, State's errors accounted for the 6 to 1 loss and second place rating in the conference. E. Mitchell and Nollan were on the mound for the Cougars, while C. Mitchell was on the receiving end of the battery.

Freshman Baseball

Playing five games and losing but one during the 1926 season, under Coach Roy Bohler, the frosh put out a fast fielding—heavy hitting aggregation. The season was opened at Colfax against their local team and a large score was the result at the cost of the Colfax nine. Journeying to Spokane, the Kittens experienced their first and only defeat at the hands of the strong Lewis and Clark High School team. The following day Cheney Normal was added to the list of those defeated, while a two-game series with the Idaho frosh closed the schedule with victories.

The season marked one of the strongest frosh ball clubs in years and a wealth of material was cited for the 1927 varsity. Several have already assured themselves places on the varsity nine, while many more are offering strong competition to regulars. Di Julio at second, Cole at short, and Rohwer at third are those who displayed big league fashion and have virtually cinched places on the Crimson-Gray infield. In the outfield McCord and Horan were the star performers. Magaurn and Hull as catchers have been alternating at the same post for varsity berths.

Sigma Chi Baseball Team

Intramural Baseball

With sixteen teams in the running for the Intramural Baseball Championship, Sigma Chi Fraternity came through the group league undefeated and for the second consecutive year won the pennant. Playing on the basis of elimination after losing two games, the Sigma Nu, Beta Theta Pi, Ferry Hall and Sigma Chi teams were the contestants in the final round.

The Department of Physical Education offers under their guidance each year a series of this kind for the purpose of encouraging interest in intramural competition and to develop a greater number of men who are unable to enter varsity competition. With approximately 160 men in this sport, and a similar number in each of the other group leagues, an opportunity is presented that will interest nearly every man student on the campus. To add to this wide variety of sports, track, golf and tennis have entered the 1927 schedule.

Teams competing in the pennant race for 1926 were: Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Gamma Rho, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Chi, Stimson Hall, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Theta Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Tau Alpha, Sigma Nu, Theta Xi, Psi Nu Sigma, Phi Sigma Kappa and Omega Phi.

[Track]

J. F. "Doc" Bohler

The man behind the gun in Cougar athletics since 1909 has been J. Fred "Doc" Bohler, at the present time director of athletics and physical education. His long service as coach on the Pacific coast and as a leader in conference circles, has caused him to be heralded by coaches far and wide as "the grand old man of the conference."

Respected and admired by sport writers, critics and coaches alike, Doc Bohler's high regard for square play and good sportsmanship has done much to place State College athletics on the high plane it now rests. The Bohler all-coast mythical basketball selection is taken as final by sport authorities all over the country.

During Doc's long regime at Washington State he has turned out many championship teams in basketball and track, the two branches of sport he coached personally until this year. State's basketball record since 1909 has been especially auspicious, five coast championships having been garnered. Despite limited material with which to work, he has turned out many track stars, including men who have won places on the Olympic team and have tied world's records in different events.

JOHN MARBLE
Manager

Track, 1926

Washington State completed the 1926 field and track season with a record of two victories and one defeat. The Staters placed second in the Quadrangular meet in Spokane, carried away a third in the relay carnival at Seattle, and in dual meets with Idaho and O. A. C. the Cougars emerged comparatively easy victors. At the close of the season six tracksters were chosen to represent the school in the annual Pacific Coast Conference meet held at Palo Alto. Although displaying an evenly balanced team in all departments of the meet, State was unable to finish better than sixth place.

The medley relay team composed of Meyers, Williams, McGillivrae and Jacobs were the representatives to the University of Washington, where they placed third. Slippern also accompanied the team to participate in the high hurdles. One week later a meet was won from O. A. C. by a three-point margin, 66-63. It was an evenly matched struggle, State not assured of victory until Williams with his premier gait won the mile.

Seven days later six men, the cream of State's tracksters, journeyed to California for the P. C. C. meet at Palo Alto and succeeded in garnering one second, one third, and three fourths. This, with a tie for a third and fourth place, gave the Cougars sixth ranking. Those making the trip were: Meyers, Divine, Williams, Spiedel, Jacobs and Mann.

For a grand finale, the cinder artists met the Idaho Vandals at Moscow and by taking eight firsts to five for the Pan-Handled Staters, won the meet by a score of 75 to 57.

John Marble, the first student to hold the position as track manager under the newly-inaugurated system, took hold of his duties in a conscientious manner and organized an effective staff to care for the track squad. In accompanying the team on the trips he cared for all transportation accommodations, thus relieving the coaches and track men of many worries.

Freshman Track

Marking one of the most successful freshman track teams in several years, a galaxy of stars, fresh from various high schools of the state, were entered in four meets during the 1926 season and emerged easy victors in all.

Under the general supervision of Dr. J. F. Bohler, with Ed Leslie in direct charge, almost daily competition was held with the varsity and at times the first-year aspirants would give the same in return. On the cinder path Ouilette, Birkett and Hall were the outstanding performers in the sprints, hurdles and distance runs, respectively. These four topped the list of point winners for the eighteen numeral men. At no time did each fail to gather at least one first and on several occasions more. On the field, Bob Gough displayed varsity qualities in the high jump.

Results of the four meets:

Washington State College	41	University of Idaho Frosh at Moscow	36
Washington State College	45	University of Idaho Frosh at Pullman	32
Washington State College	41	Cheney Normal at Cheney	36
Washington State College	47	Whitman College at Walla Walla	30

Those making seven or more points to win their numerals:

T. Ouilette	L. Birkett	R. Hall
M. Hughes	L. Hein	R. Gough
J. Temple	R. Parker	J. Koegler
O. Oehlwein	L. Bostwick	N. Erickson
H. Woodham	R. Miller	N. Barnhart
W. Cornehl	F. Fenton	L. Ellert

Wrestling

In spite of the setback given the wrestling game by its transference from a major to a minor sport category, Washington State pulled through a very successful season in the mat sport. Under the supervision of Harold Berridge, last year's P. N. A. champion in the light-heavy and heavyweight classes, a strong team was developed. Although the squad competition was confined to Idaho, the Cougar wrestlers took two meets from the Vandals by 42-6 and 58-6 scores. Berridge, Polenske and Driskell were the outstanding men on the team and aided greatly in amassing the large scores.

In the P. N. A. meet held in Portland April 15-16, Al Polenske, 135-pounder, was the only Crimson and Gray grappler to win a championship. Captain Berridge put up one of the hardest matches of the tournament, but finally lost his title.

The following men received the minor "W" award at the end of the season: Berridge, Minzel, Jurich, Warren, Clark, Polenske and Driskell.

Despite the late spring which handicapped the Cougar racquet wielders, a creditable record was made for the spring of 1926. With two lettermen, Wilcox and Tucker, forming the nucleus of a four-man team an elimination tournament was held to decide the representatives.

The season was opened with Whitman College at Walla Walla with a three-man team, the four matches being evenly divided, two going to Whitman and two to W. S. C. The following week the University of Washington journeyed to Pullman with a four-man team for a six-match meet. Although the matches were closer than the results indicated, the State University won all six.

A trip to Moscow netted the Cougar court artists a 3 to 1 victory over the Vandals, while a return match at Pullman one week later finished the season with even a greater victory over the same Idaho net team, 5 to 2.

Six new courts have added greatly to the interest of the sport and this year ought to see even a greater improvement with 60 candidates signed up for varsity tennis. Those making their minor "W" were:

Wesley Kessler
John Wilcox
Allan Brown
Arthur Tucker

Boxing, 1926-1927

Boxing, this season, has taken a decided jump forward from what it has been in the past. Due to the enthusiasm of the college fans for the squared circle pastime, a new light has been brightened by the class of 150 aspirants and the purchasing of equipment with proceeds of their bouts.

"Ike" Deeter, hard-hitting Cougar mitt artist, has taken over the duties of instructing since the absence of Glen Johnson by graduation. Under Deeter's proficient tutilage, quite a number of good boxers have developed. Outstanding in the class are Jack Reeves and "Bus" Jones, both clever men of 126 pounds; Ben Dodge and Harold Potts, who tip the beam at 135; Ernie Moses and Jack Helphrey, hard-hitting 147-pounders, and among the middleweights are Carl Leaverton, formerly of the Multnoham A. C., and Lester Gilbert. In the heavyweight division, the honors are fairly well distributed between Jack Stotler, Lester Wingard and Wyman Cox. Paul Ryan, P. N. A. champion, and "Dud" Boyd, 135 pounds, who are lost to the squad this year, have their places ably filled by Ernie Moses, 145, and Ben Dodge, lightweight. Both of these men, with Deeter and Jones, have engaged in one or more out-of-town smokers. Besides winning all of his bouts, Deeter recently annexed the Pacific Northwest championship, and emerged with a second in the light-heavyweight at the P. N. A. meet held in Portland.

State High School Interscholastic Track and Field Meet, 1926

Despite the inclement weather which featured the 1926 Interscholastic Track and Field Meet held on Rogers Field, May 14, 5000 people turned out to witness the cream of the high schools in competition for the state championship.

The state is divided into eight districts, with Seattle, Spokane, Olympia, Bellingham, Walla Walla, Wenatchee, Yakima and Pullman as points for the preliminary eliminations. Only first and second places in each event were eligible for the All-State competition.

Wenatchee repeated its feat of 1925 by winning the title again last year with 26 points. Pullman was second with 14, while Hatton and Lewis and Clark were tied for third with 11½ points each.

The value of the meet to the State College was clearly shown when Herron of Hatton enrolled here in the fall. Herron was high man of the day with 11½ tallies, while Keiser of Wenatchee was second with 10.

Seven records were broken by the prep school stars. These were: Half-mile and mile by Keiser of Wenatchee in 1:56.8 and 4:30.8 respectively; Herron of Hatton set a new mark in the pole vault at 11 feet 6¾ inches and leaped 22 feet ¾ inch in the broad jump; McNeil of Wenatchee cleared the bar at 5 feet 10⅜ inches in the high jump for another record; Campbell went into collegiate calibre by throwing the javelin 176 feet, as did Jessup of Bellingham when he registered 126 feet 3¼ inches in the discus.

This meet is an annual affair at the State College. It is under the guidance of the A. S. S. C. W. and controlled by the athletic department. The Washington State High School Athletic Association recognizes this meet as official.

W. A. A.

Any girl who is a major in Physical Education is eligible for membership in W. A. A. She must, however, have 150 points before she can become a member of the organization and in addition must make an average of 50 additional points each year she is in college in order to retain that membership.

Points may be obtained by hiking, making class teams, turning out for sports, and making honor teams in any of the sports.

Final Emblem Award

Last May, on Women's Day, Dorothy Tucker was awarded the W. A. A. Final Emblem. This emblem is given each year to the most outstanding woman in W. A. A. In choosing the winner, the committee takes into consideration scholarship, personality, athletic ability, activities and sportsmanship. Those eligible must be seniors, and wearers of the Crimson "W" sweater.

A. C. A. C. W. Conference

The Women's Athletic Association of Washington State College was hostess to delegates from twenty-one colleges and universities at the Fifth Western Sectional Conference of A. C. A. C. W., April 15, 16 and 17, 1926.

After registration, a tour of the campus and an evening reception on the first day, the first open meeting was held Friday morning, April 16. Dorothy Tucker, W. A. A. president, presided. Miss Genevieve Barber and Mrs. Victor Burke gave addresses. There was a summary of past conferences and minutes of the fourth western conference were read.

At round table discussion the following topics were considered: The policy of national A. C. A. C. W. awards, the W. A. A. lodge, standard methods of transferring points, relation of W. A. A. to scholastic standing, methods of extending competition, value of a point system, means of carrying out training rules, financing a budget, relation of W. A. A. to outing clubs, and basis for determining major and minor sports.

A closed meeting was held Saturday morning. Officers were elected, and the University of Arizona was selected as the next meeting place of the western section, in 1928. The 1927 national conference would be held at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, in April.

Recommendations were made to national conference, and the convention was adjourned at noon Saturday. An automobile trip down the Lewiston grade completed the convention.

Basketball

Due to the fact that it was impossible to have indoor baseball this year the number of girls who turned out for basketball was much larger than that of previous years. This fact made basketball the major sport of interest to all women interested in athletics. Class games were played off in the men's gym.

Section team games were played this year, and enabled the player on one game to win 25 points if she played in the semi-finals, and 50 if she played in the finals. This rule was made because of the fact that teams were limited to so many and girls who played on section teams, not having any other opportunity to make teams, were thus given a chance to win points.

The class game tournament was won this year by the Freshman girls, who came out victorious in every game they played. The Sophomores were second, winning two and losing one. The Seniors were third and the Juniors fourth. Those who made the team were:

CRIMSON AND GRAY HONOR TEAMS

Every year a Crimson honor team and a Gray honor team is picked from the four class team squads, to play the one big women's game of the year. The game is played off in the men's gym during the evening. This year it was played March 25. Teams are picked by the coach and class managers, evenly balanced so that the score will be very close, and the game an exhibition in team work and fast play.

The teams were captained this year by Polly McWilliams and Grace Lewis.

This year the game was won by the Crimson team with a score of 30 to 25. The team line-up was as follows:

Crimson		Gray
Polly McWilliams	Center	Merna Pell
Lucille Mesplay	Side Center	Edith Bentley
Violet Bixler	Forward	Eloise Harrington
Greta Smith	Forward	DeLora Wisdom
Ruth McInnes	Guard	Helen Logan
Viola Lester	Guard	Ethel Phillips

Substitutes for the Crimson—Helen Peck, guard; Josephine Gordon, forward; Velma McMillan, forward; Jessie Rankin, guard, and Lillian Clark, side center.

Substitutes fo rthe Gray—Grace Lewis, side center; Lucille Berry, center; Ruth McCall, forward, and Fritzie Goff, guard.

Hockey

The rainy weather spoiled the hockey season last year. The condition of the field made it impossible to play off the games, so they were postponed until this spring. Marie Johnson, with the aid of the class manager, chose several tentative teams, which will probably be the same ones to go onto the field as soon as the spring weather permits.

Track, 1926

The track meet for women is held on Women's Day on Rogers Field. Competition is offered individually as well as in the form of class teams. During this year's meet one W. S. C. record was broken when Lucille Rideout, junior, jumped 29.4½ feet in the hop-step-jump, breaking the previous record set in 1925 of 27.1 feet.

The meet generally ends with a relay composed of class teams. The relay was won by the sophomores. Those on the team were Grace Lewis, Rowena Bach, Gladys Thorsen and Helen Washburn.

The sophomores also totaled the highest number of points, their count being 43, the juniors had 33, and the freshmen third with 18. Class managers were Ruth Dunlap, junior, Grace Newland, sophomore, and Amy Reid, freshman, with Jessie Rankin, general manager.

Tennis, 1926

The tennis finals were played off during the last of May. In these, Vera McMartin (freshman) was defeated by Thelma Wolf (junior) by a score of 6-2, 6-3. In the doubles, Mary Elizabeth Blood and Anna Dynowska (sophomores) were defeated by Eloise Harrington and Mabel Scone (freshman) by a score of 6-2, 6-3.

June Tiffany was general manager with Mary Elizabeth Blood, Thelma Wolf and Hilda Screen as class managers. Class points were as follows:

Freshmen	2	Juniors	2

The following girls received points for being on class teams:

Baseball, 1926

The finals in baseball are always played off on Women's Day. Immediately after this game an honor team is chosen composed of the nine best players on all the teams. Last spring the honor team was composed of the following:

Faye Norris	Pitcher	Flora Ransier	Third Base
Bessie Grudge	Catcher	June Martin	Right Field
Dorothy Brown	First Base	Aileen Maguire	Center Field

Riding

RIDING

For four years the co-eds of W. S. C. have been taking riding for physical education credit. The sport is offered during two of the seasons, the fall and spring. Many girls find this an interesting as well as active sport, and the number signing up within the ranks of horsewomen are increasing every year.

Horses for the course are furnished by the Cougar Riding Academy. These horses may either be rented out or used during the riding course. The men as well as girls often get their P. E. credit in this way. An instructor is present with every class.

APPARATUS

Honors for apparatus are offered twice a year, following a series of tryouts at set periods. Honors are for two kinds, simple and advanced. This year, due to the fact that it was impossible to have indoor baseball, it was possible for one girl to win both honors within the same year.

Those winning simple honors this year were: Katherine Ragsdale, Emogene Duncan, Lucile Mesplay, Viola Quinn.

HIKING

Most co-eds who are anxious to get points generally come to know what hiking means through sore muscles and aching feet. However, regardless of the aches, parties of hikers may be seen all along the roads leading into town during the nicer months of the year.

Points are offered for hikes ranging from 50 to 100 during the year. A certain amount of time is offered for each and the only requirement beside time and number of miles necessary to constitute a hike, is that at least one W. A. A. member be present. W. A. A. sponsors a number of hikes during the year, and leaders are appointed to lead these from the organization's members.

JAMBOREE

The Crimson "W" Jamboree is sponsored each year by the members of the girls' Crimson "W" organization. It is a fancy dress affair, at which prizes are given for the best group, best couple, and an individual prize. An orchestra is furnished and the evening is spent in dancing, stunt giving, and a Grand March, at which the judges choose the prize winners.

Dance Drama, 1927

The second annual dance drama given this year, April 1 and 2, under the supervision of Miss Maurine Hall, dancing instructor in the Physical Education department, was entirely different from the one given last year. There were no speaking parts, the dancers interpreting their moods and emotions entirely through the movement of their bodies.

Part 1 of the drama was devoted to group and solo dancing, some merely rythmical movements and others deeper interpretations. Part 2 consisted of rather light comedy and nursery rhyme interpretations. Part 3, the Dance Drama proper, was taken from Oscar Wilde's "Birthday of the Infanta," the title being "The Fantastique."

This last act was costumed for the period of the "Birth of the Infanta" in Spain. In parts 1 and 2 simple georgette and crepe drapes in pastel shades were used, the girls giving their interpretation entirely through their dancing. The cast was as follows:

Joan Bailey	Martha Dyer	Lucille Mesplay
Edith Bentley	Emogene Duncan	Mildred Meyers
Annette Bryant	Gladys Erickson	Doris Miller
Muriel Carr	Sara Green	Leone Petticrew
Helen Carr	Vivian Harmon	June Rosenhaupt
Nan Cowan	Mary Hungate	Dorothy Adams
Josephine Clyde	Bluebelle Kromer	Margaret Pfarr
Florence Cole	Maria McKay	Norine Trace

DESIRES AND DESTINIES—1926

The dance drama, "Desires and Destinies," was the first of its kind to be given at W. S. C. The drama was concerned with an interpretation of the Trojan war as set out in Homer.

The drama was presented under the supervision of the Women's Physical Education department with the cooperation of the Art and Dramatic departments of the college. The plot was written by Richard Steiner, a professor in the English department, and was under the direction of Miss Ruth Radford, instructor in the speech department. Miss Neva Main, dancing instructor, acted as dancing coach. The music furnished during the production was under the direction of Karel Havlicek of the music department.

WOMEN'S DAY—1926

Women's Day was held on Roger's Field last May for the first time in cooperation with the May Fete and athletic events. Charlotte Walker, May Queen, was seated upon a huge throne at the east side of the field and from there she presided over the entire afternoon's program, which included a series of dances, track events, games and features. Awards were presented by Dean Annie Fertig and Miss Genevieve Barber, head of Women's Physical Education.

FIELD BALL

This was the second year that field ball has been offered on this campus as a major sport. Considerable interest was aroused last year and carried over into this year. The sport was very successful, despite the fact that bad weather made it necessary to wait until spring to play off the class tournaments. Viola Lester was general manager of the sport. Class managers were: Freshman, Lucile Mesplay; Sophomore, Margaret Andrews; Junior, Anne Norvell, and Senior, DeLora Wisdom. Those who made the teams were:

FRESHMAN			JUNIOR	SENIOR

Women's League is an organization in which every woman, by virtue of her registration in college, holds membership. The purposes of the League are: To promote unity and mutual helpfulness among the women, to maintain the social and moral standards of the college on a high plane, to insure interest in student activities, training in citizenship and high standards in scholarship.

The organization takes an active part in offering college hospitality, especially at registration time, when it meets trains, helps with registration teas and affords the new girls a chance to meet the old students. Women's League also sponsors various other movements, such as the Big-Little Sister Walk-out put on by Mortar Board, the Crimson "W" Jamboree, given by W. A. A., and the annual dance given by Mortar Board.

The League holds membership in the Washington State Federation of Women's Clubs and the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students.

The local Y. W. C. A. is a part of the National Young Women's Christian Association, which consists of 585 student associations in the colleges and universities of the United States. On this campus it sponsors each year a bazaar, promotes drives for welfare work, through its council helps to build programs for the Associations in the Northwest, and through study and work strengthens the college girls' ideals and purposes.

FRESHMAN COMMISSION
Poore Crane Kemp

SOPHOMORE COMMISSION
Tiffany Killian Harrington

The Young Women's Christian Association on this campus does a great deal of its work through its committees and discussion groups. The four commissions are made up of the girls in the respective classes who are vitally interested in Y. W. C. A. work.

Freshman Commission this year has taken up various personal and campus problems and interests, working through discussion groups led by ten upperclass girls. Sophomore Commission has been interested principally in problems of international and racial prejudice. They have discussed these subjects at meetings and started an international store in the Y. W. C. A. rooms to further the interest in foreign countries.

Junior Commission has been chiefly interested in the development of personality, high ideals and purposes of college girls. It has fostered a book interest contest and had discussions on the lives of great women. Senior Commission has stressed the importance of community adjustments and contacts.

MARCIA SEEBER

As general secretary for W. S. C.'s local Y. W. C. A. organization for the last four years, Miss Marcia Seeber is known to all girls on the campus as a friend, adviser and leader. Her principal work is the advising and supervising of the whole Y. W. C. A. organization, the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, and the four commissions.

COMMISSION LEADERS

Each year during the fall term, Freshman Commission is divided into small groups of ten or twelve girls each and these groups are turned over to the Freshman Discussion Group Leaders for discussion of campus and personal problems of interest to the freshman girls. This year there were ten discussion leaders, all upperclass girls: Lorraine Fletcher, Evelyn Glascock, Pearl Smallidge, Florence Johnson, Louise Long, Elsie Schmidt, Anne Norvell, Theda Lomax, Jean Fulmer and Josephine Smith.

To be a member of "Big Five" is to attain one of the highest honors that can be conferred upon a student at the culmination of a college career.

Leadership, as shown in active affairs of the student body and general popularity, are the two chief things considered when the executive council of the A. S. S. C. W. appoints a men's big five and a women's big five to superintend the work done on Campus Day, one of Washington State's oldest traditions.

Homecoming Day

The above picture is one of the prize winning signs that are erected each fall to welcome the old grads and friends of Washington State back to the campus for Homecoming Day. On this day all the groups place signs of welcome on their houses and the entire campus is pervaded with a spirit of enthusiasm and festivity.

The big feature of Homecoming Day is the football game, always one of the largest conference contracts of the season. The grads, with all their former college spirit, enter into the cheering and yells for their Alma Mater as only loyal Washington Staters can. Between halves prize loving cups are awarded to the men's and women's groups having the best Homecoming signs.

Following the game there is a big all-college alumni banquet held at the Commons building where the returned grads discuss their college days and exchange experiences of the last few years.

The Glee Club concert features the evening's entertainment and several Homecoming dances given at the White Owl, the Armory, and the Gym conclude the day's events.

Young Men's Christian Association

OF THE STATE COLLEGE OF WASHINGTON

The Y. M. C. A. is a movement, initiated and controlled by and for men. The primary demand it makes is that men shall try to be Christian in their association with one another. Oftentimes the movement—one young man working with another—becomes confused with and swallowed up by the organization that carries it. To avoid this, organization of the campus Y. M. C. A. is minimized and association stressed. All control is vested in students and no outside organization can dictate to the local association. This is oftentimes misunderstood.

The movement works itself out in some very practical commitments. The first is that a man must actually try to be a friendly soul. Unless a man really cares for folks, he has small chance of becoming a member of an association. There are a number of friendly associations on the campus. This is a Christian Association—a coming together of those who care about developing their own Christian lives and helping other men to do the same. This is the moral challenge the Y. M. C. A. is continually asking college men to meet.

To those who meet the challenge an opportunity is given to put themselves to a strenuous test—the test of trying to live on the plane of Christian ethics. The acid test of their living is whether they are serving men in the spirit of Jesus.

This service is rendered in several ways. Discussion groups are conducted that aim to make men think in ethical terms. Bible study helps to find out about Jesus and His cause. Socials are given that cause men to have a happy time with their fellows. Deputation trips are made that influence high school men in their personal living and aid them in becoming properly adjusted to college life. An employment and housing service is maintained for those who might need it. The game room is open to any who might need relaxation. Many men go to the Seabeck Student Conference each year, where they meet men from twenty-five colleges and universities throughout the northwest. These are the men who will bulk large in business and professional life during the next twenty to thirty years. Here he learns to invest his life wisely instead of spending it. Challenging speakers are brought to the campus to share with students the results of their years of thinking and living. All these services are provided by students through gifts of money and time. The controlling group of students is called the Cabinet.

With the students is a group of business and professional men known as the Advisory Board. A general secretary is hired by these groups and serves as a coach to the college men.

The Y. M. C. A. is available to all who take up the challenge to live and the opportunity to serve.

Stock Judging

Recognizing the importance of interesting young men in the study and improvement of the various breeds of domestic animals, the managements of the larger Live Stock Expositions have made the college stock judging contests an important feature of their program. The various state colleges are represented by groups of five students who are selected from the advanced classes in livestock judging. The teams are rated on their ability to judge and give oral reasons for their placing classes of beef cattle, sheep, hogs and draft horses.

The State College of Washington has been represented at the Pacific International Live Stock Judging Contest for seventeen years. At the 1926 Exposition, representatives from the states of Oregon, Montana, Idaho, California, and Province of British Columbia competed.

Washington State College ranked third. Vernon Chapman was the high scoring individual on the Washington team and placed fourth among the thirty-two contestants.

MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS

THE ALUMNUS is a small magazine published monthly by the Alumni Association of the college and is a digest of news for the graduates. The magazine is made up of two sections, one news of the college and the other news of the alumni. It is mailed to subscribers.

THE HANDBOOK OF INFORMATION, published annually by the Associated Students, contains memorandum blanks and information for new students. In it are listed the school traditions, college songs and yells and other information necessary to acquaint the freshman with the customs of the institution.

THE STUDENT DIRECTORY, known to the students as the "Fussers' Guide," is a directory of all students in the college. The names are in alphabetical order and are followed by the home address, class, department and telephone number. It is published by the Y. M. C. A. a few weeks after the opening of school each fall.

THE QUAD is a shop paper put out by students in the print shop laboratory for practical experience. It is published solely for the experience of the students taking printing.

THE MONTHLY BULLETIN OF THE STATE COLLEGE is a small bulletin published with the idea of keeping the public in touch with the work of the college. It prints the news of the various departments of the college, giving any changes or additions in courses. The Engineering experiment station publications are also listed in these bulletins.

THE BULLETINS OF THE AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION are divided into three classes: General, Popular and Newspaper Bulletins. The general bulletins are based on the investigational work of the station and are issued at irregular intervals during the year. The popular bulletins are issued at frequent intervals throughout the year and contain information of general interest on various phases of agriculture. The newspaper bulletins are issued for distribution to the agricultural journels and newspapers of the state.

EXTENSION BULLETINS are pamphlets dealing with problems of particular interest to farmers and their families.

In addition to these publications, the college maintains news services which furnish the newspapers and magazines of the northwest with live news concerning the students, the faculty and the college in general.

Girls' Glee Club

MRS. LAVERNA KIMBROUGH

This year completes the sixth annual tour of the Girls' Glee Club. With a reputation for years of high-grade entertainment the club has perfected its work to an even higher pitch of excellency. One can hardly exaggerate the impression created by these girls.

Mrs. Kimbrough is to be congratulated upon the fine program and the very unusual showmanship qualities embodied in the program she arranged, for there was more variety, more color, more snap to the production than was ever thought to be possible.

One of the loveliest features was the Russian Fantasy, which was a typical picture of old Russia carried out by lovely costumes, beautiful lighting effects and an exquisite scenery, the drop being painted by Oscar Yampolsky, the noted artist and a member of the faculty.

A college diversion depicting the life of an art student in a co-educational institution introduced Mrs. Kimbrough's Co-Ed in an entirely new way.

The two knock-out comedians, Icky and Acky, did their part in adding mirth. The all Co-ed String Quartet, the soloists featuring new talent, the Vocal Quartet added originality and all kinds of harmony.

These are just some of the many features of the program, which has won such favorable comment throughout the state.

Men's Glee Club

Harold Logan, Director

The Men's Glee Club, thirtieth annual circuit of the state came to a climax after giving two home concerts in the college auditorium.

Harold Logan deserves much credit as director of the Club, this having been his first year at the State College and as director and instructor he has proved to be of great ability. This year Mr. Logan introduced the idea of presenting a group of ensemble numbers without piano accompaniment and with only a "pitch" passed throughout the club's personnel before the song begins. This method is considered the highest test of musical ability of a men's singing organization.

The ensemble numbers were beautifully worked out, and the features included a nine-piece orchestra playing both jazz and classical numbers. The sax foursome gave comedy numbers and a novelty skit with Norman Thue playing the piano and Ed Lehan with his clever soft-shoe dancing. The program proved to be the best possible. We should well be proud of these boys who are true representatives of the College.

Karel Havlicek

Karel Havlicek, head of the violin department of the State College of Washington, has been with the college for six years and he has some very fine results to show for his efforts in this institution. He is a man of enthusiasm, and as his major interest is in the field of violin instruction rather than in concert work, he has thrown all his energies whole-heartedly into his teaching. He gets response, in the way of devotion of his pupils.

His first work was taken in the Prague Conservatory, Czechoslovakia, under Mark and Suchy; later he studied with Friedman in Berlin, and with Anton Witek, concert master of the Berlin Symphony Orchestras. Later he received his training from Leopold Auer in Loschwitz, Germany, and in New York. He has toured extensively in the United States, Europe, Canada and South America and has appeared in recitals with such artists as Destinn, Nielson, Bezanzoni, Vallinpardo, Crabbe, Sparks and many others of renown.

College Pep Band

Success of the College Pep Band this year was largely due to the fine cooperation between the members of the band and their leader, Dud Wilson, and Manager Ed Redford. The leader was able to get the boys to work with him; he maintained discipline, a thing which no student leader in the past has done. Members of the band are chosen on their experience, tone reading, ability and execution.

This year the band has caused many favorable comments on their new uniforms of gray trousers and bright crimson and gray sweaters. At the football games the band appeared with a new feature, that of forming a "W" in the field before the opponent, and playing first their victory song and then ours.

Outside Attractions

Music of the highest type and only of the highest type has been the aim of the Music Department of the State College of Washington. The year of musical events has been most successful for musicians of world-wide fame, having furnished entertainmnet for students, faculty and also townspeople.

The first outside attraction was the concert given by Louis Graveure, internationally famous Belgian baritone. His varied program sung in many different languages consisted of operatic selections, folk songs, classical and humorous numbers. By many critics throughout America, Graveure is said to be the greatest living concert singer.

The Schubert Male Quartet, accompanied by Florence Richardson, an accomplished violinist and pianist, furnished the second program for the college. The quartet was made up of four very unordinary voices, which blended together in perfect harmony. Fortunate were the ones who had the opportunity of hearing them.

The American artist, Albert Spalding, called the "prince of violinists," proved very true to his title in his recital at the State College of Washington, December 4. His program consisted of Bock gems, a Tartini concerto, a sonata of Brohms, and associated group of selections.

Spalding showed a complete mastery of his instrument, his technique seemed perfect and his phrasing and shading most artistically expressed. Never before in Bryan Hall did such tones come from a violin.

Roland Hayes, the negro tenor, who has given concerts throughout Europe, gave an outstanding concert March 12. His facilities for expression and his mode of expression stand unparalleled. His program consisted of four groups English, French and Italian and negro spiritual songs.

Throughout all songs the artist remained more than adequate to every demand upon his voice, which is not strong, but is a voice of unrivalled clarity and sweetness of tone.

Dramatics

Dramatics has deservedly become an important activity at Washington State College. The plays produced this year have all been most praiseworthy, both from an educational and from an entertaining standpoint. Many roles were played in a manner worthy of professionals. Adequate proof of the worth of the plays is the excellent support that all enjoyed.

Maynard Lee Daggy, head of the Department of Speech, has been very successful in his work during his four years on the Washington State College campus. Each year marks a great growth in the enrollment of the department and a great improvement in the quality of work produced. Mr. Daggy is a graduate of De Pauw University, and has studied at Chicago University, Indiana Law School, and the Boston School of Expression. He is a lecturer of high repute and has written two books on public speaking and dramatic reading. Mr. Daggy is national president of the National Collegiate Players, honorary dramatic fraternity.

Miss Ida Lou Anderson is a graduate of Washington State College. This is her second year as instructor of speech in the dramatics department of the college. Her dramatic ability is made manifest in her teaching and directing.

Hamilton Cummins is a new member of the faculty in the dramatics department. His work this year, especially his play production, has been most commendable. Mr. Cummins is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and has attended Harvard, Coe College, University of Illinois, and Emerson College of Oratory and Dramatic Art. He has played with the Boston Players, the Portal Players, the Bainbridge Players, and Universal Pictures.

Scene From "Three Wise Fools"

"THREE WISE FOOLS"

The first dramatic event of the year was Austin Strong's comedy, "Three Wise Fools." The play was presented by National Collegiate Players, October 29 and 30, 1926.

"The production was marked by spontaniety of action and convincing characterization. Ralph McBride did an exceptionally fine piece of character work as the eccentric Teddie Findley. Lenore Taylor Johnson was charming in the role of Sidney Fairchild. However, all the players performed in a most creditable manner. A comedy of unusual merit, the play was well presented and well received." Maynard Lee Daggy, assisted by Ida Lou Anderson, directed the production.

Douglas	Otto Johnson
Policeman	Glen Smith

Scene From "Rollo's Wild Oat"

"ROLLO'S WILD OAT"

"Rollo's Wild Oat" was presented December 10 and 11, under the direction of Hamilton Cummins. Mr. Cummins also played the title role. The play centers about Rollo's determination to play Hamlet, despite the opposition of his family. The last curtain finds him defeated in this great ambition, but quite solaced by the love of Goldie McDuff, late of his company.

"The play served as an introduction for Washington State's new speech professor, Hamilton Cummins, who appeared in the title role. Natural, talented, and mannerly, his appearance on the stage contributed much to the performance of the other actors. The play moved rapidly, clean-cut, humorous, and well portrayed. Ego submerged itself in an effort to aid his student cast and give them the benefit of training and experience."

Scene From "Hell Bent Fer Heaven"

"HELL BENT FER HEAVEN"

The 1924 Pulitzer Prize Play, Hatcher Hughes' "Hell Bent Fer Heaven," was produced under the direction of Maynard Lee Daggy. This drama of the simple mountain folk of the south was quite different from the usual college play. The southern dialect and heavy character roles made the play difficult to produce, so all the more credit is due both the cast and the production staff for the fine success the play achieved.

Special mention is due Edwin Adams for his portrayal of Rufe Pryor, the half-mad religious fanatic. This was a difficult character part, but Adams handled it very creditably."

Scene From "The Fool"

"THE FOOL"

"Who did not carry away from Channing Pollock's 'The Fool' a deeper spiritual understanding, did not have his eyes and ears open to the true beauty of the play." The production was a splendid piece of workmanship executed with a seriousness beyond the years of its young actors.

This powerful drama, produced in the college auditorium, March 4 and 5, has as its theme the attempt of Daniel Gilchrist, a young minister, to live today as Christ lived.

The large cast was excellently trained, the settings were unusually beautiful, and the play in its entirety was an outstanding event of the dramatic season.

Hamilton Cummins directed the production.

Scene From "One of the Family"

"ONE OF THE FAMILY"

The dramatic season of 1926-27 ended with a long laugh when "One of the Family" was given, March 18 and 19.

"The play told of the revolt of Henry Adams, member of a historically famous Boston family, against the aged and musty ancestral conventions that stifled him."

"One of the Family" is a true comedy—one humorous situation follows another from rise to fall of curtain.

Maynard Lee Daggy directed the play.

[R. O. T. C.]

MAJOR F. D. CARLOCK, U. S. A.

The potential force supporting and maintaining our government is that of our people organized in a military way for defense. Although this force is ordinarily invisible, it is nevertheless frequently called upon to perform its function. When needed it is needed quickly, and unless organized and prepared in advance our government and our institutions could be destroyed before an army could be raised in their defense. An efficient armed forced can not be created over night, nor within a year; it must be developed by training, discipline, high ideals, noble traditions, honor and patriotism.

To insure the existence and perpetuity of our government and institutions we must either maintain a very large standing army or a small standing army supported by the whole people trained in arms as a citizenry army. For obvious reasons in the nature of our institutions the latter should be and is our national preservation policy.

It is the function of the R. O. T. C. to develop that technical knowledge and military leadership in selected college men whose training and education should entitle them to positions of leadership, to qualify them as officers in our citizenry army, commonly designated the "Reserves."

Junior Prom

The juniors brought a bit of romantic China to the campus when they gave their prom on April 22 and 23. Co-eds in evening gowns of bright colors contrasted with the still brighter colors in the Chinese paintings which decorated the walls. Soft lights changing at intervals of two minutes slipped through the oriental lanterns, giving the dance a mystifying atmosphere.

Military Ball

One of the most elaborately decorated dances of the year was the Military Ball, sponsored by Scabbard and Blade, and given the evening of February 19. Streamers of white and blue and brown entirely disguised the brick walls of the gymnasium. A canopy from which hung streamers rippling in varying colors of lights covered the ceiling. The orchestra was separated from the ball room by two white pillars stained with many colored lights.

Co-ed Cabaret

Black and white silhouettes with green fir boughs made up the color scheme of the Spanish Cabaret sponsored by Mortar Board, given on Friday, December 3. The walls were covered with black and white lattice work interwoven with brightly colored balloons. The balcony of the gymnasium was equipped with tables, at which thirsty dancers obtained refreshments. The enthusiastic spirit of the school year was reflected on this occasion, at which the co-eds were the hostesses.

INTERCOLLEGIATE KNIGHTS

The Cougar Guards chapter of Intercollegiate Knights came as the result of the obtaining of the Washington State Cougar by the University of Washington.

In order to avoid further conflicts over college traditions and standards the University founded Intercollegiate Knights, and this chapter was granted as one of the five colleges in the national order. Other chapters are at the Universities of Oregon and Idaho, and at Oregon Agricultural College.

The organization, which is composed of underclassmen, receives all visiting athletic teams and helps in every way to foster a bigger and better spirit on the State College campus. Service, sacrifice and loyalty are the paramount principles upon which the order is based.

THE WASHINGTON STATE CHAPTER

PHI KAPPA PHI

ESTABLISHED NATIONALLY 1897
FORTY CHAPTERS

ESTABLISHED LOCALLY 1919

Phi Kappa Phi is a scholastic honor society, "dedicated to the unity and democracy of education, and open to honor students of all departments of American universities and colleges." All phases of scholastic endeavor are recognized: Literature, art, science, economics, agriculture, law, and medical science.

Its prime object is to emphasize scholarship and character in the thought of college students, to hold fast the original purpose for which institutions of learning were founded.

The first chapter was established in 1897, in the University of Maine. During the thirty years which have passed since then, forty chapters have been added in all parts of the United States. The Washington State Chapter was chartered in 1920.

Flowers are lovely; Love is flower-like:
Friendship is a sheltered flower:
O! the joys, that came down flower-like,
Of Friendship, Love, and Liberty,
Ere I was old.
—COLERIDGE.

I see from my house by the side of the road
By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the ardor of hope,
The men who are faint with the strife.
But I turn not away from their smiles nor their tears,
Both parts of an infinite plan——
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

—SAMUEL WALTER FOSS.

Purpose—To unite in a common bond the students and faculty of departments of the College of Engineering; to help coordinate engineering education and engineering practice by bringing prominent practicing engineers and educators on the campus to talk to the members of the organizations, and to give the engineering students a realization of the scope of, and the problems confronting, the engineering profession at the present time.

The campus activities of the Associated Engineers include regular weekly meetings and programs; an annual mixer; an official publication, "The Washington State Engineer"; the Engineers' Ball, and the Engineers' Show.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB

The motto of the Cosmopolitan Club Is: "HUMANITY, ABOVE ALL NATIONS."

The object of the Club is: To assist in promoting throughout the world the spirit of human justice, tolerance, cooperation, mutual esteem and the desire to serve humanity without regard to race, nationality or creed.

To this end the Club is acting as a social medium for the students attending Washington State College of whatever nationality as a means of insuring that students coming from countries outside the United States come in contact with the best that the college and the community have to offer in order that they may thereby become acquainted with the true spirit of America.

NATURAL HISTORY CLUB

The Natural History Club fosters and seeks to develop interest in all branches of natural history. In a formal way this is done by holding fourteen public meetings during the school year, at which illustrated lectures on nature topics are given by students, faculty, and visiting lecturers. In addition four field trips are taken to regions of natural interest, where authorities on botany, zoology and geology help the student to interpret the various phases of animate and inaminate nature. Membership in the club is open to anyone who is interested.

Another Nell Story

In the cabin on the hill, the candle light was burning. Overhead, the night hung dark. The rain swept in gusts from off the roof. The lightning flash scarce revealed the ominous scene. The moaning of the pine trees and the crash of the distant mountain torrent were carried on by the rushing wind.

Within the cabin, a figure crouched on the lone, rickety table. It was the widow Nell, brooding—brooding over a cross-word puzzle. In the corner, her half-wit son, Dudley, was laughing with childish glee, as he gently tapped his baby sister over the head with a twelve-pound sledge.

The lightning flashed. The candle sputtered out. It was a hellish night. All were awaiting the return of the drunken father, Launcelot McGregor. Twelve years ago tonight had he left, galloping away on a freight car, in search of the Holy Jail. Would he ever return?

A shot rang out. A bullet grazed her ear. 'Twas only Dudley at target practice. Tears came to Nell's eyes—tears from the onions which she had just peeled. Oh, would Launcelot never return? How she had loved him!

The cracking of the floor brought Nell to her feet. She turned quickly. It was Dudley at play again. How he laughed as he advanced on her with a stiletto glittering in his hand. What a playful son—truly Launcelot's offspring. The mother instinct surged up in her. She reached out her hands and encircled his neck. He turned black in the face, but she held him tighter, her son. At last he sank to the floor. She had strangled him. A distant coyote howled and three rattlesnakes thumbed their noses at each other. Would Launcelot never return?

Somehow or other the howl of the wind, the clash of the nearby icebergs, and the swearing of the monkeys in the sage brush seemed to tell her that, tonight, he would return. But, would she remember him after all these years? Would she recognize that Medusa face of his, with that Bull Montana haircut? How joyfully he had left her as she lay on the floor, starving. He was the man she had loved. Ha! Ha!

Sssssssssssssss!!! The pitter-patter of footsteps sounded in the distance. What could it be? Was it the cow regurgigating again, or just the roosters playing checkers? A knock on the door. A lifted latch. In on the floor fell a human form, dead—yes, dead drunk.

Nell jumped from her chair and gave him a vicious kick in the head. Could it be Launcelot, Launcelot, the man she had loved? Had her slue-foot husband returned after all these twelve years? She recognized him now. Yes, it was Launcelot, her moron husband, with the same smile, that same tooth, and those same socks.

LINES BY A CO-ED AT TWO P. X.

I wonder why I feel so tired?
I only hiked nine miles today,
And cleaned my room,
And washed my hair
And dusted down the dirty stairs.
Let's see—I b'lieve I walked downtown
To look at styles,
Then made a dress.
I had my suit and coat to press.
At four I walked with Ed awhile.
Then we came home.
The dance tonight
Was all that I had dreamed about.
Good gosh! Is that a serenade I hear?
I wonder why I feel so tired?

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I slumbered, weak and weary,
In the attic dark and skeery, with the members and the mice,
At my covers came a jerking, then a tugging, then a shaking,
As of someone rudely waking, waking from a slumber nice.
"It is those members," I muttered, "waking us for good advice.
By this mean and crude device."

Ah, distinctly I remember how the members grew so bold,
Well equipped with wooden paddles for the pledges chilled and cold.
How they dragged us from the attic; made us croak like silly frogs;
Made us neigh and prance like horses; made us yelp and bark like dogs.
Then we stood in frigid silence—then the angle we assumed—
For the paddle we were doomed.

DOG! DOG! DOG!

The city man went to the country to do a bit of hunting. A country acquaintance provided the dogs to accompany the hunter. The hunter sallied forth only to return in about an hour.

"Well, why are you back so soon?" queried the farmer.

"I'm after more dogs."

"More dogs! Those were good dogs I gave you."

"I know, but I've shot all those dogs already."—Michigan Gargoyle.

THE REASON WHY

Whenever your work seems dreary,
And all your As are Cs,
And you are getting weary
Of even trying to please,
And when you should be studying,
You only want to sing—
And your thoughts are always straying,
Why, then you'll know—'tis spring!

Two fraternity men were talking about the finances of their respective houses:

"What's this I hear about your house being on the rocks financially?"

"Oh, it was true, but since that rich pledge of ours flunked out, we have been on our feet."

"You're crazy, how would that put you on your feet?"

"Well he took his roadster with him, didn't he?"

She's writing to her beau tonight,
A letter full of comments bright
And cute—
About the weather.

She's writing to her distant beau,
And as the lights grow dim I know
It's not—
About the weather.

In Retrospect

PERHAPS the most anxious moments for an editor come during the period when the Annual has been completed and the time for distribution is drawing near. I am writing this just two weeks before The Chinook is scheduled to go into the hands of the student body. Many thoughts occur to me as I write. I am wondering just how this year's book, a record of achievements made during the past year by athletic teams, student organizations, individuals, and all those things so closely allied with college life, will be received.

The book itself will be "different," for that is the secret of the success of a college annual, I believe. I have tried to weave a bit of olden times, days of knights in armor, into this year's edition of The Chinook. The success of such a publication depends a great deal upon the art work available, and I am very grateful to Worth D. Griffin and W. D. McDermitt of the Art Department for their splendid aid rendered by taking over the making of all the charcoal drawings for the division and sub-division pages. I am especially grateful for the painting submitted by Mr. Griffin and the drawing of Dr. E. A. Bryan made by Mr. McDermitt.

An efficient and capable staff is necessary for the production of a college annual and I am indebted to this year's staff for their splendid cooperation. There is one in particular who deserves much praise, Isobel Keeney, the Associate Editor, who entered into the work with a zest that proved invaluable.

The help of engravers, printers, and manufacturers of covers is necessary to edit a book of this sort. To Mr. Fred S. Wiman of the Western Engraving and Colortype Company, and Mr. R. E. Shipley and Mr. W. A. McMahon of the Inland-American Printing Company, we, the Editor and Business Manager, are deeply indebted. Their valuable aid and exceptional supervision have assisted greatly in the making of the book. To the David J. Malloy Company goes the credit for the cover, which shows workmanship and skill.

There are others to whom plaudits should go and among these are Mr. R. R. Hutchison of the Artopho Studio and Mr. C. E. Graves of Graves' Studio.

THE EDITOR.
